The Whole Story on Readership

When you read or hear about declining newspaper circulation, keep in mind this is only part of the story.

Gannett newspaper readership is growing . . . despite price increases and reduced distribution in remote areas.

On a given day, a growing number of people read local Gannett newspapers, even though these people aren't home-delivered customers and didn't purchase a copy at a rack or newsstand.

These are the pass-along readers, and last year they numbered more than 750,000.

But just like the paying customers, these 750,000 people read news stories, editorials and advertisements to stay in touch with their communities. And their demographics are good.

These are people whose lives are enriched by their hometown newspapers. Even if they're not counted by industry watchers.

Those are the facts. That's the other part of the story.

Arlo and Janis have spent the last decade entertaining readers with dry wit and endearing them with off-beat family spirit. Jimmy Johnson's humor touches readers lives.

Arlo & Janis consistently finishes at the top of comic surveys:

- Chicago Sun-Times readers rated Arlo & Janis a "9," the highest rating for any comic in the survey.
- Milwaukee Journal readers ranked Arlo & Janis in their top five, tied with Peanuts®.
- Birmingham Post-Herald readers between 25 and 44 ranked Arlo & Janis #1.
- 50% of South Bend (Indiana) Tribune readers voted Arlo & Janis their favorite comic.

Editors love Arlo & Janis:

"Arlo and Janis are the quintessential baby boomer parents. Life is one interesting mystery to them, and they try to muddle through. Most men and women today feel the same way. One of the things I like best about Arlo & Janis is that they love each other even when they are annoyed with one another. "

— Chip Visci, Detroit Free Press

"Here you have a husband in his 40s who lusts after sailboats; a wife who likes to garden and longs for the remote control; a son who tunes them out with video games. For readers who rarely see themselves in the newspaper, Arlo & Janis is one strip they can relate to. I think that's why it does so well with our readers. Like Lynn Johnston's 'For Better or For Worse,' it's a comic that feels comfortable. It evolves. It entertains."

— Hank Stuever, Albuquerque Tribune

Ladder of Success

It's demanding, challenging and time-consuming. Classified Outside Sales Manager Wayne Snow enjoys taking part in it.

Wayne participates in the St. Petersburg Times Professional Development Program. Introduced this year to help staffers grow professionally, the program attracted 85 applicants. Only 15 were selected: a diverse group from different departments such as News, Circulation, Production and Accounting.

Each month, participants meet with senior managers to discuss the functions of the newspaper's many departments. Participants also learn hands-on what other staffers do. That includes making sales calls to non-subscribers, compiling a news budget or role-playing as board of directors members.

According to Wayne, "The Professional Development Program is a great opportunity to prepare me to handle increased responsibility."

In other words, it's a step in the right direction.

Groups file brief for Abu-Jamal

SIX NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS of journalists, led by the Society of Professional Journalists, have asked a federal court to order Pennsylvania officials to restore the First Amendment rights of death-row inmate and former broadcast journalist Mumia Abu-Jamal.

A hearing is expected next week.

Abu-Jamal was convicted in the 1981 shooting death of a Philadelphia policeman but maintains he's innocent. Questions surrounding his guilt or innocence, whether he received a fair trial and violations of his free-speech rights have put Abu-Jamal in a media spotlight in recent weeks (E&P, July 22, p. 17).

Abu-Jamal is a former chapter president of the National Association of Black Journalists, which signed the friend-of-the-court brief supporting his right to communicate with the outside. The other associations filing the brief were the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, National Association of Hispanic Journalists and Asian American Journalists Association.

"Inmates are not required to check their constitutional rights along with their personal belongings when they pass through prison gates," the brief said. "Despite their incarceration, inmates maintain many of the constitutional rights afforded law-abiding citizens, including the First Amendment right to freedom of expression."

While imprisoned, Abu-Jamal reportedly has been denied contact with the press and has had his mail confiscated and censored.

"These restrictions represent an unconstitutional 'punishment' for merely speaking one's mind," NABJ president and Washington Post columnist Dorothy Butler Gilliam said on behalf of NABJ. "He has the right to speak and be heard by the public."

"With more than a million people housed in prisons across this country, it is extremely important for the courts to protect the First Amendment rights of inmates and Americans outside prison walls to communicate," said SPJ Legal Defense Fund chairman Christi Harlan.

"For those of us outside prison," Harlan adds, "it is inmates like Mumia Abu-Jamal who provide us with important and diverse views that ensure the accountability of a system we all pay for but most of us with never experience."

Abu-Jamal is to be put to death by lethal injection Aug. 17. Ironically, NABJ members will gather in Philadelphia for their annual convention the same week.

American Publishing getting new name, new responsibilities

AS IT SHEDS some of its smaller Midwest papers and takes corporate responsibility for The Telegraph publishing company in London, American Publishing Co. is changing its name, too.

Following formal approval of the reorganization of its Toronto-headquartered parent, Hollinger Inc., American Publishing will be known as Hollinger International Inc.

More important than the name change, however, the reorganization will give APC a substantial infusion of capital.

Under the plan, Hollinger Inc. will credit APC with $114 million, which will "substantially increase the capitalization and ultimately the market liquidity of APC," its parent said in a statement.

When the reorganization is complete, Hollinger will own about 85% of all outstanding class A and B shares of the former APC, giving the parent 95% of voting shares.

At the same time, APC will assume ownership of a 58.5% stake in The Telegraph publishing company, publisher of the Daily Telegraph of London.

For APC, the addition of the London paper is another step in what has been a transformation of the Frankfort, Illinois-based chain once composed almost entirely of small-town monopoly dailies in America's heartland.

In the past year, APC bought two of Chicago's four dailies, the Chicago Sun-Times and the Daily Southtown. APC has also, for some time, had the Israeli English-language paper, the Jerusalem Post, under its corporate umbrella.

APC went public in May, 1994. APC stockholders will vote on the reorganization plan in September.

Detroit News workers warned: Come back or else

by Mark Fitzgerald

WITH THE STRIKE by 2,500 workers against Detroit's two daily newspapers in its second week with no bargaining scheduled, one of the papers told its newsroom employees to return to work — or else.

"You're very important to the [Detroit] Free Press and we want you back as soon as possible. But if the strike drags on, we will soon face the prospect of making more lasting arrangements," Free Press publisher Neal Shine and seven other top newsroom managers wrote in a July 21 letter to the paper's striking Newspaper Guild members.

The suggestion that journalists could be permanently replaced came as Detroit Newspapers demonstrated that it could distribute to a substantial percentage of its normal circulation despite the strike by drivers and mailers.

For its part, a Guild statement dismissed the letter as "another example of the union-busting efforts" of the newspapers.

Many Guild members have criticized Free Press management for what they say are transparent efforts — some of them printed in the management-produced newspaper — to split newsroom workers from the four other production unions in the strike.

Susie Ellwood, Detroit Newspapers vice president for market development, said an increased number of non-union carriers accounted for big increases in home delivery

Gannett To Buy Multimedia

For a purchase price of $1.7 billion media giant gets 11 dailies, 49 nondailies, vast cable, broadcast and entertainment holdings

by Tony Case

THE BIGGEST U.S. newspaper company is getting even bigger — and expanding into cable television and TV syndication.

Arlington, Va.-based Gannett Co. Inc., which publishes 82 daily papers, including USA Today, announced this week it will buy Multimedia Inc. of Greenville, S.C., for some $1.7 billion.

Gannett picks up Multimedia's 11 dailies and 49 nondailies, including flagship properties in three Southern states where Gannett has no newspapers. They are the Greenville News and Piedmont, Asheville (N.C.) Citizen-Times and Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

Gannett's total daily newspaper circulation will surpass 6.4 million with the acquisition.

The company said it will pay $45.25 for each of Multimedia's 37,865,078 outstanding shares and assume or retire the company's existing debt. The purchase price will be adjusted if Multimedia's debt as of Dec. 31 exceeds a specified figure.

The boards of both companies unanimously agreed to the deal, which is subject to stockholder and regulatory approval.

Media General Inc. of Richmond, in concert with a group of smaller communications concerns, reportedly had offered $1.5 billion for Multimedia.

"We are extremely pleased to be the successful bidder for Multimedia," Gannett chairman, president and CEO John Curley said in a prepared statement. "The quality of Multimedia's management and employees and its well-located assets will enhance Gannett's position as a leading news and information provider."

With the transaction, Gannett gets not only additional newspapers but also Multimedia's vast cable, broadcast and entertainment holdings.

Unlike other newspaper companies, Gannett has never broken into the flourishing cable industry. But all that changes with the purchase of Multimedia, whose cable systems serve over 450,000 subscribers in five states and earned $53 million in profit last year.

Newspaper industry watchers wondered, however, whether Gannett would retain the cable interests, pointing to aggressive competition from monster telephone companies.

"Its main target was the newspapers and broadcast stations," said media analyst John Morton of the firm Lynch, Jones & Ryan Inc. "It's widely perceived that to compete against the telephone companies [in cable], you must be very big, meaning three million to four million subscribers. I don't think anybody expects them to go out and get 2½ million subscribers."

Gannett, which currently owns 10 TV stations and 11 radio stations, builds its broadcast empire with the addition of Multimedia's five network-affiliated TV stations and two radio stations, all situated in the Midwest and the South.

Some of television's most visible personalities now will work for Gannett, as Multimedia's entertainment division produces shows hosted by Phil Donahue, Rush Limbaugh, Sally Jessy Raphael and Jerry Springer.

But Wall Street also was unsure about the future of this part of the acquisition, as some these programs have seen their share of the market diminish as talk shows have proliferated.

Besides, Gannett hasn't had the best of luck in the TV production game.

In the 1980s, it entered into a costly and unsuccessful venture with former NBC chairman Grant Tinker that produced a magazine program based on the nationally distributed USA Today.

Last year, Multimedia reported operating revenue of $630.5 million and operating income of $189.4 million. Gannett's operating revenue totaled $3.8 billion and its operating income was $812.8 million.

On July 24, the day the deal was announced, Multimedia's shares closed at $42.45, up 50¢. Gannett closed at $53.25, down 50¢.

The Standard & Poor's rating service warned that financing the transaction could boost Gannett's debt levels "significantly" from the $830 million reported as of March 31, and assuming or retiring Multimedia's debt — about $560 million at the end of the first quarter — would further increase Gannett's burden.

The company said it will pay $45.25 for each of Multimedia's 37,865,078 outstanding shares and assume or retire the company's existing debt.

Besides USA Today, some of Gannett's better-known newspaper titles include the Detroit News, Louisville Courier-Journal and Des Moines Register. It also publishes the weekly magazine USA Weekend and operates

Vietnam ties

WE HAPPEN TO agree with the administration's decision to extend diplomatic recognition to Vietnam. There are strong arguments in favor of it. But there remain some disturbing violations of human rights that should be cleared up. One of them is the arrest and imprisonment of Doan Viet Hoat.

His case was brought to the attention of world journalists at the FIEJ meeting in Paris, May 28-31, by Reporters Sans Frontieres, an international organization for the defense of press freedom. Doan Viet Hoat, 53, has a PhD in education from the University of Florida in 1971. He became associate dean of the Buddhist University of Van Hanh in Saigon on his return to Vietnam. In 1976, he was detained as an "anti-socialist reactionary" and released in 1988 when he co-founded a clandestine magazine distributed in Ho Chi Minh City, which published many articles in favor of democracy and pluralism. Arrested in November 1990, he was charged with producing anti-socialist propaganda and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

This is an opportunity for the United States to demand that Vietnam show its good intentions — why it should deserve recognition — and obtain the release of Doan Viet Hoat.

Reporters Sans Frontieres, in an effort to arouse an international campaign by their colleagues, cited four other journalists who are in prison in the Ivory Coast, China, Cuba and Syria. They are only five of over 100 journalists in prison around the world today. They are:

Gao Yu, China, arrested as she was to leave for a one year visiting scholarship at Columbia University. In prison since October 1993. Recipient of the FIEJ Golden Pen of Freedom Award, which she could not receive.

De Be Kwasi, Ivory Coast, in prison since February 1995 for "complicity in insulting the head of state."

Yndamiro Restano Diaz, founder of the Association of Independent Journalists of Cuba, serving a ten-year prison term since Dec. 1991.

Salama George Kila, an activist in the Committee for the Defense of Democratic Freedoms and Human Rights in Syria, sentenced to three years is prison. His release time was supposed to be March of this year, but he is still in prison.

These are abbreviated dossiers of five journalists who have been jailed, unjustly, around the world for trying to practice their profession. They could be duplicated, we feel sure, in the cases of the 100 other journalists who have been jailed, according to the Reporters Sans Frontieres. They cry out for the support of their colleagues worldwide, who enjoy the privileges of press freedom. The Vietnam case is one that should bring an immediate resolution.

More confidentiality

"WHAT IS IT that all these people are reluctant to make public that is not already exempted," asks Jane Kirtley, executive director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press. That was in response to a recommendation that the Alternate Dispute Resolution Act contain further exemptions from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act. We would also like to know the answer to her question.

Letters to the Editor

St. Louis editor's speech on public journalism called 'provocative', 'disturbing'

I FOUND YOUR report of Bill Woo's speech on the dangers of public journalism (E&P, May 6) both provocative and disturbing.

There is much worthy debate about public journalism, and the hottest area is what Woo, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, chose: the public involvement of newspapers and editors in public affairs. But it's a false question.

Public journalism asks only that newspapers examine the vitality of public life in our communities and the connections that life has with the content and health of our own institution, the newspaper. A notion that public journalism requires abandoning objectivity is a strawman, as easy to knock down as it is to set up.

I think Woo did a terrific job of summarizing the degree to which newspapers are in trouble, and also of sounding an alarm that we not easily throw aside valuable notions such as detachment.

I was troubled, however, by the degree to which his remarks fell into the pattern of the "old journalism" that Jay Rosen criticizes. I think Woo got the separations right, but missed all the connections. I don't dispute that quite a few editors have taken the mantle of public journalism and thrown it over all sorts of well-intended, but misguided, projects that got them entirely too involved in community issues. But I think he grossly overgeneralizes in suggesting public journalism requires the abandonment of detachment and/or objectivity.

I hear public journalism calling us to re-examine the core beliefs of traditional journalism, experiment with story forms and approaches, and see if there isn't a new way of looking at journalism.

It focuses its efforts on exploring the connections between the vibrancy of public life and the health of daily newspapers (both of which walk with canes these days). To me the self-examination is essential, and the theory one worthy of discussion and experiment.

Public journalism calls for abandoning detachment about only one thing: accepting our share of responsibility for the quality of public life and public debate in our communities and in the nation.

A good many journalists hide behind walls built with "objectivity" and "detachment" and say: "I only print the facts. Facts are neutral. Don't blame me when government doesn't work. I'm not responsible for a disillusioned electorate or the low estate of civil discourse in America."

Some journalists also use objectivity as a way of denying a deeply rooted personal cynicism that expresses itself in journalism that seeks only the negative in American life (in business, in government, in community affairs).

In sum, I think it makes better sense to look at the connections: Where does the "bold journalism" seem to be in need of a tune-up? Where might some elements of public journalism be grafted to what we're already doing well?

One way of looking at the connections was suggested recently by a group of editors grappling with the very questions Woo raised. Why not, they asked, look at the old questions (who, what, when, where, how and why) in a slightly new way? Instead of regarding them as describing the action of an event, use them as tools to analyze whether our reporting increases civic capital.

Here's the way I might ask them: Who is affected and who can affect the outcome? What are the trade-offs and consequences of various solutions? When did this happen before? (What can we learn from history?) When will it be felt here? Where else has this issue cropped up? Where might we look for solutions? How can citizens get involved in solving the matter? Why should anyone care?

We might agree that good journalism already does this, if all too rarely. But let's also agree on two other things: (1) this doesn't require abandoning objectivity; and (2) journalism that asks these questions enriches public life and makes newspapers better.

I understand Bill's point that we need to be careful not to adopt the latest fad and throw out valuable tenets such as objectivity and neutrality. I think the real concern is that newspapers too often use the excuse "this is the way we've always done it" as armor against the sting of truth carried in a new idea.

50 YEARS AGO . . . The Treasury Department launched its greatest savings stamp program of the war effort, enlisting the help of 100,000 newspaper carriers to sell 20 million 10¢ war stamps by Oct. 27 to provide a fleet of 200 LCVP (Landing Craft Vehicle Personnel) for the invasion of Japan.

The New York News advertised that 6,207,000 people lined up (sometimes 17 blocks long) to buy copies of the paper during the 17-day strike, when it was not available at newsstands.

Postal Fraud

Society of Professional Journalists protests recent actions of postal inspectors who posed as reporters for a ficticious magazine to interview a postal worker on workers' compensation; government official says they'll do it again, if necessary

by Debra Gersh Hernandez

A RECENT UNDERCOVER probe by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, in which inspectors posed as reporters for a fictitious publication, has raised the ire of journalists.

In a letter to Postmaster General Marvin Runyon, Society of Professional Journalists president Reginald Stuart of Knight-Ridder called the action "indefensible" and urged Runyon "to issue a strong policy statement making it clear that such activity is unacceptable and is not to be repeated."

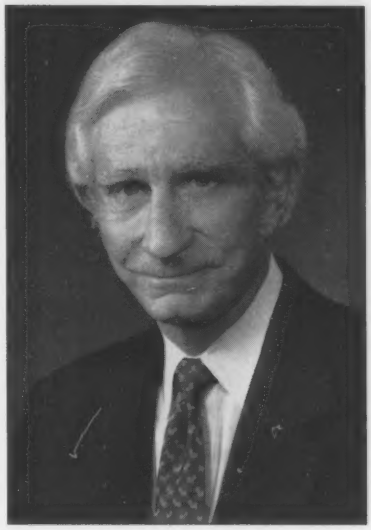
The case came out of Saginaw Township, Mich., where postal inspectors posed as reporters for a fictitious magazine called Small Business Quarterly.

The inspectors used this guise to interview a Postal Service employee who was collecting workers' compensation because she claimed a back and shoulder injury from 1993 left her unable to work.

Inspectors posing as journalists interviewed the woman about her extensive work at a crafts shop she and her husband own, which allegedly was performed during the period she claimed she was unable to work for the Postal Service.

"The act of federal investigators posing as journalists may be legal, but is totally unacceptable and a clear violation of common ethics by an agency considered a public trust," Stuart wrote to Runyon.

Stuart noted that inspectors have "a wide range of resources available to legitimately investigate alleged wrongdoing by employees or users of the postal system without having to resort to the journalists' tactics used in this instance . . . "



Postmaster General Marvin Runyon was urged by SPJ "to issue a strong policy statement making it clear that such activity is unacceptable and [is] not to be repeated."

"We place a high premium on truth and honesty and do not condone reporters posing as anything other than reporters," Stuart continued. "It violates a public trust to do otherwise. We hope you feel the same way about postal workers."

Stuart's letter pointed to a quote from a postal spokesman that this is "not a widespread policy," and he told E&P that may suggest there are other such cases.

Daniel Mihalko, manager of congressional public affairs for the Postal Inspection Service, however, said this case was the first he'd ever heard of where inspectors posed as journalists.

Mihalko noted that Department of Justice guidelines and federal appellate court decisions allow investigators to pose as journalists.

In addition, the action was approved by the inspectors' supervisor, he said.

There are "no prohibitions against using any particular type of undercover identity," Mihalko said, adding that inspectors "would not adopt any [disguise] that would cause a violation of confidentiality.

"I would certainly see a problem if we posed as reporters for a legitimate news-gathering organization, such as the Washington Post or something," he added.

"In this case, they represented themselves as journalists for a fictitious business journal. The information they gathered was volunteered by the individual in this case. This person knew it was going to be published, although in this case it was fictitious. There was no promise of confidentiality in exchange for the interview," Mihalko said, noting he would have a problem if confidentiality were promised and then used against the individual.

"This is a sensitive issue," he conceded, saying he was sensitive to the concerns of the journalism profession.

But in light of the fact that the practice has not been prohibited by DoJ or the courts, Mihalko was "not prepared to say we are never going to do it again. It is not a routine investigative technique, but if we feel it can further a legitimate law-enforcement purpose, we will use it."

Mihalko further pointed out that it is a risky technique, since it is so easy to check out. If the investigator claims to be working for an existing news outlet, a simple call can verify that. If the organization is false that, too, can be discovered. (continues)

Workers' comp cases are a "big ticket" for the Postal Service, which paid some $263 million in claims — most of which are legitimate — for the first half of fiscal 1995, Mihalko said.

In 1994, postal investigators were able to save $55 million from uncovering people who were cheating the system, Mihalko said, estimating the projected cost avoidance in the Michigan case alone to be almost $680,000.

When it comes to government agents posing as journalists, however, "one occurrence is too many," for SPJ counsel Henry Hoberman of Baker & Hostetler. "It's really a reprehensible, outrageous practice."

Noting the "long, ugly history" of this issue, Hoberman recalled two cases in which FBI agents posed as journalists to gain access — one to an Irish newspaper and the other to a spy who wanted to tell his story to the media.

"Part of the problem is there is no reliable information about how widespread the practice is," he said. "We know of these handful because they happened to come to light. I think this is just the tip of the iceberg. There are many more examples that we probably don't know about."

Hoberman pointed out two major problems with law-enforcement agents posing as journalists.

"First, it undermines the credibility of the American press," he said. "Journalists rely on sources for their information. They cultivate those sources carefully, building and reinforcing trust over time.

"If a potential source has to wonder if the person representing himself as a journalist is a law enforcement agent, the source will be reticent. The flow of information to the American public could slow to a trickle," Hoberman commented.

"Second, and equally important," he continued, "is the sharp line of demarcation between law enforcement agents and the traditionally independent, watchdog press.

"We place a high premium on truth and honesty and do not condone reporters posing as anything other than reporters. It violates a public trust to do otherwise. We hope you feel the same way about postal workers."
— Reginald Stuart, Society of Professional Journalists president

"Journalists should not become an appendage of law enforcement. Law-enforcement personnel who pose as journalists threaten to erode the perception of the news media as an independent group, unaffiliated with the government groups they cover," Hoberman explained.

"Sources could dry up. The crucial perception of news media as independent could be harmed," he said.

Mihalko was "not prepared to say we are never going to do it again. It is not a routine investigative technique, but if we feel it can further a legitimate law-enforcement purpose, we will use it."

Legally, there is not much journalists can do, although most of the agency guidelines require a supervisor to approve the impersonation of a journalist.

"One avenue of protest is to ensure that a superior has reviewed and approved of the request, and that it's not just a Rambo-type operation," Hoberman said.

"Obviously, the other avenue is vociferous protests to top officials, just as SPJ has done in this case. If the top officials are not aware of the practice, they can't curtail it," he noted.

Va. daily to cease publication

THE LEDGER-STAR, an afternoon daily in Norfolk, Va., and sister of the morning Virginian-Pilot, ceases publication in August, according to publisher Frank Batten Jr.

The final edition will be Aug. 25.

"Everyone who now works on the Ledger has been offered a job on the Pilot," Batten said in a letter to employees. "The change to morning-only publication will not significantly change the number of people who work in the company."

The news staffs of the two papers, which are owned by Landmark Communications Inc. of Norfolk, were combined in the early 1980s.

Joe Delatte, marketing director, said the Ledger-Star's circulation had fallen to less than 10,000.

"It's sad," he said of the closure. "Somewhat of an institution."

The Virginian-Pilot has a circulation of about 190,000. — AP

Saturday paper slated to return

THE POTOMAC NEWS, Woodbridge, Va., is slated to return to a seven-day publishing schedule at the end of July, when it brings back its Saturday edition.

The paper was founded as a weekly in 1959, and its publication schedule was gradually increased until it was publishing Monday through Saturday in 1993.

Saturday publication was suspended when a Sunday edition was introduced.

"There was always a plan to bring the Saturday paper back," said editor Luke West. "It was just a matter of when."

Twelve staffers will be added to the current workforce of 140, and the subscription price will be increased from $2 to $2.50 a week. The newsstand price of the Saturday edition will be 35¢, the same as the Monday through Friday papers.

Undercover Techniques By Reporters

Journalism faculty members debate the ethical pros and cons

by Mary Hausch

DECEPTIVE TECHNIQUES USED by the Nashville Tennessean in an award-winning series on life in low income housing projects sparked controversy at the 11th annual National Workshop on Teaching Ethics in Journalism, held recently at Vanderbilt University.

Faculty members from 21 universities debated the practices used by two Tennessean reporters who spent a month living in a low income housing project to gather information for a series depicting life in the area. The reporters did not tell residents they were reporters before using their names and pictures in the stories which were published last year.

Tennessean reporter Susan Thomas defended the undercover operation and said the deception was necessary to see life as it really exists in poor areas of Nashville. She said the reporters had planned to tell their subjects they were journalists before the stories ran, but unforeseen circumstances made that impossible.

She said the stories, which received the Best of Gannett Public Service award for 1994, resulted in the development of an educational program now being used in some areas of Nashville.

Journalism educators were divided on whether the deceptive tactics were necessary, and whether the stories should have been done if reporters could not get their information by more traditional means.

Thomas' reporting was defended by John Seigenthaler, former publisher of the Tennessean, who said that the series showed many residents of Nashville the conditions others live under.

The Tennessean's method's of gathering information for the series was defended by former publisher John Seigenthaler, who said that final product showed many residents of Nashville the conditions others live under.

He chastised the educators for not reading the articles before criticizing them. Noting that most people praised the Tennessean when it used undercover techniques to write about activities of the Ku Klux Klan, Seigenthaler stated, "Sometimes our perception of exploitation is related to who is being exploited and how we feel about them."

He said journalists justify deception after making moral judgments about the subjects of their stories.

Deni Elliott, Mansfield Professor of Ethics at the University of Montana, told the educators that acts of deception by journalists must be justified in advance by using five criteria. They include an analysis of the information you are attempting to uncover, an exhaustion of all other methods of obtaining the material, and development of a plan that eliminates innocent bystanders from harm.

She said it also is important for journalists to share with the public what was done and why, even if the information expected is not obtained.

Elliott said she worries about people like those portrayed in the Tennessean stories being exploited unknowingly.

Louis Hodges, who teaches applied ethics at Washington and Lee University, said it is sometimes necessary for journalists to use deceptive techniques.

"A news organization that doesn't have the guts to deceive when it needs to is diminished in my opinion," he said.

Hodges showed the workshop participants a tape of Diane Sawyer's undercover story about questionable food handling practices at Food Lion stores, which was broadcast on ABC's Prime Time program. He suggested that exposing the food chain's deceptive practices warranted deception on the part of journalists.

Also during the workshop Seigenthaler, who is now chairman of the First Amendment Center at Vanderbilt, told conference participants that editors must start saying no to gossip-based stories which they get from television or the tabloid press.

"Nobody in this world, in which gossip is news, dares say no to anything once it is displayed on the tube. Newspaper editors and television news directors are on a treadmill and dare not step off," he observed.

Curious Silence

Inter American Press Association, which will meet in Caracas this fall, fails to publicly support Venezuelan journalist who fears he'll be jailed if he returns home

by Tony Case

JOURNALIST CARLOS BALL has been affiliated with the Inter American Press Association for more than a decade and would like to go to the group's upcoming meeting in Caracas.

After all, he's a native Venezuelan who has worked at several newspapers in the South American country, and he has many colleagues there he'd like to see again.

But it's unlikely Ball will return to his home, considering that President Rafael Caldera called him a "criminal" and "traitor" on national television and that an aide to the leader said in print Ball was a "liar" and "mercenary" who employed tactics reminiscent of Nazi propagandist Joseph Goebbels.

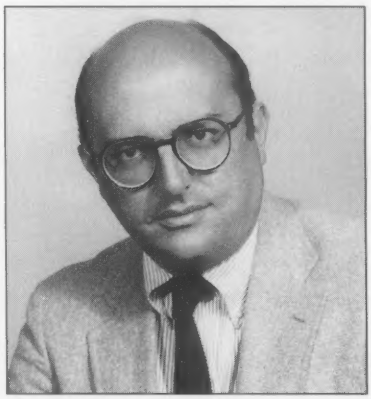
Ball believes he would be placing himself at tremendous risk if he were to participate in this year's IAPA conference.

"Treason in Venezuela is 30 years," he explained, "and I am 55 years old."

Miami-based IAPA, whose mission is to defend the freedom of the press and of journalists throughout the Western Hemisphere, has been curiously silent about Ball's predicament. This, even though just this month the association called on Guatemalan leaders to investigate attacks against an American newsman who was ordered out of the country, and criticized the government of Cuba for harassing journalists there. (See sidebar.)

Meanwhile, Caldera has been asked to deliver the keynote address at IAPA's October gathering in Venezuela's capital city.

Now living in Florida and running his own Spanish-language news service, Agencia Interamericana de Prensa Económica, Ball is the most visible, and vilified, expatriate Venezuelan journalist to have aimed a critical eye at the Caldera government. His columns appear in 14 countries, in more than 30 newspapers from New York to Santiago.



Now living in Florida and running his own Spanish-language news service, Carlos Ball is the most visible, and vilified, expatriate Venezuelan journalist to have aimed a critical eye at the Caldera government.

In the United States, he's featured most prominently in the Wall Street Journal, to which he's contributed since 1987.

Ball reported in the Journal that under Caldera, Venezuela had suspended constitutional liberties and property rights, established price and currency controls and virtually instituted a nationalized banking system.

"Venezuela," he once wrote, "has become, overnight, the second socialist republic in the Caribbean."

The government has carried out especially brutal measures against the press.

Caldera last December signed what Ball described as "the worst press law in the hemisphere," providing for the imprisonment of newspeople who aren't licensed with the Colegio, a sort of national press union. Andrés Mata, publisher of Venezuela's largest newspaper, El Universal, said the law had "a Soviet flavor."

Furthermore, strict exchange policies give bureaucrats the power to determine how much newsprint newspapers can import, and when they can import it.

"By controlling the economy," Ball observed, "they control newspapers completely."

At least one Venezuelan daily has closed since sanctions were imposed. El Diario de Caracas, which Ball once edited, folded three weeks ago. The new press law, higher taxes and steep newsprint prices proved "a lethal combination," according to Ball.

It's clear about whom Caldera is speaking when, according to an account in El Universal, he rails against "those who go to the U.S., that write columns in the most important economic dailies in the world, pointing to Venezuela as a country where one cannot live, a country without a future, a country moving toward failure."

José Castellanos, a press spokesman in the Venezuelan Embassy in Washington, D.C., did not respond to questions regarding Caldera's publicized remarks about Ball.

"I can be a journalist, or I can be a public relations person for the government of Venezuela. I have to tell the truth," Ball said in an interview.

"It's not a personal thing between me and Caldera," he added. "It's about things he doesn't want people to know about Venezuela."

Ball's situation has received a smattering of attention in both the U.S. and foreign press. He's been profiled in the Washington Times and the Spanish-language magazine Pulso del Periodismo, published by the Latin American Journalism Program at Florida International University. El Mercurio of Santiago, Chile, has come out in his behalf. And in an editorial last week, the Miami Herald charged Caldera with "incoherent leadership" and accused the president of "defaming" those who dare criticize him.

While encouraged by the support he's found in friends and various publications, Ball is anything but pleased about IAPA's treatment.

"They haven't made any public statement, and that's shameful," he said. "IAPA hasn't come out and said, Look, this isn't acceptable behavior on the part of Caldera."

If President Clinton had labeled any newsperson "traitor," every press group — including IAPA — would have "raised hell," Ball maintains.

The journalist is particularly disappointed that IAPA plans to feature Caldera on its convention program, commenting, "If this guy is a sworn enemy of press freedom, he should not be invited to attend."

IAPA spokesman Ricardo Trotti said leaders of his group were aware of Ball's uneasy relationship with Venezuelan powers but hadn't any plans to officially support the beleaguered journalist.

"All of the information we have on Carlos Ball is in our Committee on Freedom of the Press and Information," he related. "I don't know the status of the analysis of that information. We don't know what steps will be taken by IAPA."

Trotti supposed an IAPA representative might ask Caldera about his views on Ball during the Caracas meeting.

Incoming IAPA president and Miami Herald publisher David Lawrence couldn't be reached to discuss the Ball matter, as the executive was traveling this week.

While it has stopped short of rallying behind Ball, IAPA has expressed disapproval of mandatory licensing of newspeople.

Such a restriction "violates the accepted norms for freedom of expression as guaranteed by international law," IAPA president Raul Kraiselburd, publisher of El Da in La Plata, Argentina, said in a statement issued the first day of the Summit of the Americas, held last December in Miami.

"Gathering and distributing information," he added, "is the right of each and every human being, not just of the most educated or influential."

Danilo Arbilla, who heads IAPA's press freedom committee and publishes the weekly magazine Busqueda of Montevideo, Uruguay, has said the international press group had nothing against journalists' organizations. "What we strongly oppose," he stated, "is the requirement of union membership or an academic degree in order to practice journalism."

Attempts to reach Kraiselburd and Arbilla also were unsuccessful.

John Sweeney, a friend of Ball who was a journalist in Venezuela for more than 15 years and who now works at the conservative Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., where Ball once was a fellow, understands why IAPA, as well as the Venezuelan media, might have some trepidation about defending Ball.

"The government controls access to the essentials of the print and broadcast media," he said. "The government can make it very difficult for you if it wants to."

It's unlikely Ball will return to his home, considering that President Rafael Caldera called him a "criminal" and "traitor" on national television.

Some might be ambivalent about Ball's situation because he resides outside Venezuela, Sweeney noted, commenting, "Carlos is isolated from the worst things the government might do to him, personally and economically."

Pulso del Periodismo, in an article headed "How To Betray Your Country," contends that Ball's isolation makes him an authentic threat in the eyes of Caldera and his deputies.

Ball is "one of the few Venezuelans," the magazine said, "who can write and diffuse his conviction that what is good for the country is less of [the existing] system and more democracy."

Sweeney, who twice was jailed in Venezuela for his work and vows he won't go back, cannot say enough positive words about Ball and his journalism. He feels his colleague — a "warm-hearted and intelligent man who has an accurate vision of what's wrong" in his homeland — has been "unfairly and viciously" attacked.

"I celebrate his criticism and share it 100%," Sweeney said. "I think he's providing a great service."

David Asman, features editor at the Journal, agrees that Ball's coverage of Venezuela has been on target, pointing out that Ball was the first to report on the problems of Banco Latino. Its collapse in January 1994 marked the biggest bank failure in Latin American history.

"He's got the number of the Venezuelan government pretty well," Asman said, calling Ball's writings "the most insightful columns on Venezuela I've ever seen."

Asman, who himself has reported extensively from Latin America, said Venezuela might not appear a violent place at first view. But unrest always seems to be "bubbling under the surface," he added, recalling the two military coups under deposed President Carlos Andres Perez.

"You have this veneer of peacefulness, and then this veneer of pluralism," the editor said. "It's a very complex country that has yet to resolve some fundamental issues about democratic rights — and freedom of the press is certainly one of them."

Caldera clearly can't stand to be criticized, "and understandably so," says Asman. "But you don't deal with your critics by calling them 'traitors.' "

IAPA speaks out on Guatemala, Cuba

THE COMMITTEE ON Freedom of the Press and Information of the Inter American Press Association has urged the Guatemalan government to investigate attacks against a U.S. journalist who was ordered out of the country.

IAPA also requested clarification of various murders and attacks against Guatemalan reporters, and criticized the Cuban government for harassment and intimidation of journalists.

IAPA's stance on Guatemala was prompted by a promise of the government there to investigate attacks on journalist and filmmaker Sky Callahan, who, the press group said, was beaten by soldiers, kidnapped and threatened with death unless he left the country.

In a letter to President Ramiro de

NPPA Celebrates Its 50th Anniversary

by Debra Gersh Hernandez

AS THE U.S. marks a myriad of historic 50th anniversaries, a group of people who have chronicled those events also is celebrating its semicentennial.

The National Press Photographers Association has come a long way from its first meeting in an Atlantic City, N.J., hotel in June 1946.

"Actually, they had tried to start it before and it had failed," said charter member Morris Berman. "We just couldn't get enough photographers all over the country to become interested or become members."

As Claude Cookman detailed in A Voice is Born, a history of the NPPA's founding, prior to World War II, Indianapolis News photographer Joseph Cravens founded the National News Photographers Association.

"Although it tried to live up to the 'national' in its name, its appeal never extended much beyond the Midwest," Cookman explained. "During World War II, while many news photographers were being drafted into the military, the NPPA faded quietly into an organization in name only."

The NPPA "developed in the mind of Burt Williams, who worked on the Hearst paper, the [Pittsburgh] Sun-Telegraph," Berman said. "I worked with him, so we exchanged ideas. He finally got the thing started again and he asked Joe Costa [of the New York Daily News] if he'd be the president, because he felt that Joe had more personality and could sway people, and he did."

The first NPPA meeting was preceded by a 10-city telephone conference call — the first hour compliments of AT&T — that set the groundwork for the new organization.

The neophyte association was aided by the Cigar Institute of America, which underwrote some of the costs. The Cigar Institute, which also had an image problem, had run contests for news photographers, offering cash prizes for pictures of men smoking cigars in favorable light, Cookman wrote.

"There are not too many of us around, who are charter members," commented Herb Schwartz, a senior cameraman for CBS News.

"The New York Press Photographers Association, which is one of the oldest news organizations in the United States, was in existence" when the NPPA was formed, said Schwartz, a former NYPPA president, noting that Costa was a member of the NYPPA.

"Most of our members of the New York board felt [NPPA] was sort of like an intrusion into their backyard, so a lot of them objected to it," Schwartz said.

"But a lot of the younger people, and I guess in those days I could consider myself a younger person, thought it would be a great idea and we went along with it.

"Everybody who joined at that time was considered sort of a renegade," Schwartz continued, "because the New York organization felt it would be sort of an intrusion on their territory having another group come in.

"When the thing actually got started, it was an interesting concept," he said, adding that the NPPA opened its membership to still photographers as well as the newsreels.

One of the key issues behind the founding of NPPA was to give photographers a louder voice in fighting for cameras in the courtroom.

"We felt we were news media also and were entitled to be in there," Berman said. "It was a tough battle. We only had dues of $8 and $10, and we were trying to finance these things in the courtroom.

"Some of the judges went with us, and we put through a lot of them," he said, adding, "Even today, that O.J. Simpson thing, they're having second thoughts of it now, aren't they?"

Other issues of concern to the NPPA were photographers' rights and stemming the tide of physical attacks against news photographers.

The group was very careful not to get involved with labor relations of any sort, lest it be seen as a union by publishers, Cookman's book noted.

Berman, who worked for the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette after the Sun-Telegraph folded, has not missed an NPPA convention in 50 years. He, Schwartz and Joe Rosenthal all spoke with E&P during the NPPA's 50th annual convention in Washington, D.C.

Berman recalled the first convention in Atlantic City in 1946, when there were, "I think, 33 people . . . and now we have 11,000 members, so we must have done something right.

"Every year now, for 50 years, I've been coming to it," he said, "and sometimes they talk about the same thing, but there've been so many changes," such as higher ethical standards, the increase in the number of women in the profession, and considerable improvement in technology.

One of the most notable changes in the convention was the elimination of the Miss NPPA beauty pageant, which was conducted each year from 1947 until 1964.

The pageant was part of a plan by Atlantic City promoter Mall Dodson. In return for sponsoring and helping to promote the contest, the cost of the NPPA convention was underwritten by the city.

Berman recalled, with a laugh, having more trouble with the contestants' mothers, who were there as chaperons, than with the women in the competition.

"I'm real proud of the fact that we decided to eliminate the contest and stand on our own," Berman said. "Now they charge us full price for everything, where we used to get subsidies for the hotel, but that's another chapter.

"It's part of our history and we can't forget it, although I think a lot of our members would like to forget it," he added.

Thankfully, women have gone from being singled out by NPPA for their physical attributes to being honored for their professional excellence as Photographer of the Year, NPPA's highest honor.

The technology also has changed markedly, both for still photographers and television cameramen.

Schwartz started his career as a still photographer for the New York Sun and then moved to CBS in 1950 after the paper folded.

"Certainly the industry has grown, and it's expanding and changing almost daily," he said.

"The concept of news has changed from what you shoot today will be seen tomorrow, to what you shoot today you're seeing right now," Schwartz said.

One thing that will never change, according to Berman, is the photographer.

"The man or woman behind the camera will never be replaced by electronics, because it's the imagination that makes a good picture," he said. "You get six people at one scene and you get six different versions. Sometimes they see things that the others don't see. It's a wonderful, wonderful profession."

The neophyte association was aided by the Cigar Institute of America, which underwrote some of the costs.

But Schwartz said he missed the admiration photographers used to engender.

"The respect of the news photographer is something that we all miss," he said. "There used to be a tremendous,

Rating Coverage Of The Catholic Church

by M.L. Stein

SECULAR NEWS COVERAGE of religion and the Catholic Church in particular merits only a C — maybe a C-minus — judging from views expressed by the Archbishop of Los Angeles and others at a recent Catholic Press Association conference.

"Sadly, in some quarters of journalism, so much of what passes for news and information today is nothing more than sensationalism, gossip and an unhealthy fixation on conflict and confrontation," said Cardinal Roger Mahony, the archbishop. "The attitude of 'no news is good news,' and 'good news is no news,' seems endemic, especially in the secular press' coverage of the church."

Ignorance of religious terminology is one manifestation of poor reporting of church activities, Shaw said. He chided reporters who wrote that Pope John Paul "conducted" a Mass in New York's Central Park. "Masses are not conducted," he pointed out.

Cardinal Mahony's comments came in a homily during his celebration of a Mass at the recent CPA meeting in Los Angeles. The Archdiocese's press spokesman, The Reverend Greg Coiro, was equally critical of media reporting on the Catholic Church at a later panel discussion of the subject.

Mahony, who previously has expressed irritation with religion reporting, allowed that the general press and the clergy "do not always view the world and the Church with the same eyes," but rapped the media for focusing on four "hot-button" issues in their coverage of the Catholic Church: artificial birth control, abortion, celibacy and the male-only priesthood.

He singled out CBS's Sixty Minutes and reporter Mike Wallace for their coverage of the Religious Education Congress in Anaheim last February.

"I kept encouraging them to see and experience what was going on all around them," he recalled. "Tens of thousands committed, happy, joyful and spirit-filled Catholics were gathering . . . to celebrate and grow in their faith in Jesus Christ and His Church. The real story was staring them in the face but they could not see it."

The cardinal, who is considered liberal on some social issues and very conservative on doctrine, called on the Catholic Press to counter what he believes is distorted reporting by matching the secular press in professionalism and by reporting the news honestly, "even if that means revealing the very humanness, brokenness and imperfections of Christ's Church."

He urged the CPA to report good and bad news but in such a way that its audience "never loses sight of the good news, which is, after all, the raison d'etre of the Catholic press."

In all stories and commentary, the cleric went on, Catholic journalists must constantly ask: "How will this story feed the flock? How will this opinion piece nourish Christ's body, the Church? . . . When there is a scandal to report, report it, but tell, too, how this relates to humility, to seeking forgiveness and to reconciliation."

Every story, regardless of how horrible or negative, contains an element that can be used to teach and illustrate the "Gospel of Life," Mahony asserted.

Mainstream media did not fare much better in a panel, "How the Secular Press Covers Religion."

Not too well, except for some experienced religion writers on major dailies, according to Father Coiro.

He blamed broadcast journalists and general assignment reporters in both media for inaccurate coverage of church affairs.

From questions by some reporters, he said, "I can tell right away that they know nothing about the Roman Catholic Church. There is a great deal of ignorance among people in the press."

However, Coiro acknowledged that sometimes communication problems arise because he must withhold certain information.

In addressing the media, he insisted, "I always tell the truth, but I can't always tell all the facts. The public has a right to know, but not everything."

He cited cases involving priests in alleged sex scandals, commenting, "Sometimes there is good reason not to reveal."

Certain reporters, Coiro observed, will say, " 'You're hiding something.' They refuse to believe I'm telling the truth when I am."

All too often, the priest said, the press feeds the appetite for "dirt in the marketplace."

Expansive Religion Section

Dallas Morning News offers weekly six-page section with three staff writers and a stable of freelancers

by Julia Duin

THE DALLAS MORNING News has thrown a can-you-top-this gauntlet to newspapers across the country in the form of a novel six-page religion section.

Unveiled last Dec. 5, the weekly section involves three staff writers, a section editor, a researcher, designer, part-time copy editor and a stable of freelancers.

No other paper in the nation has a section of such scope, as only a handful of papers even have two full-time religion writers. Only 50 to 60 papers have even one.

Its backers say sports sections get this breadth of coverage every day and, thus, religion, which consistently outdraws and out spends sports by billions of dollars every weekend, should get equal treatment.

Feedback about the Dallas section has been overwhelmingly favorable.

"It is one of the most positive section launches I've ever seen," said executive editor and senior vice president Ralph Langer.

In an era where some dailies have been gutting their prize-winning religion pages, the Morning News' sophisticated product has gotten extra attention.

"People are really happy that we are approaching religion coverage like we cover business and sports," says section editor Sharon Crigsby. "All the most critical issues of our time have religious components."

"I'm very pleased, very pleased," managing editor Bob Mong said. "People really like the fact the paper is paying more attention to the subject."

The new section has color on the front and back pages, and a range of relentlessly ecumenical topics. One week's section, in mid-March, included a book review on a secretive Catholic brotherhood in New Mexico, an article describing local classes for nonobservant Jews, a profile of former surgeon general nominee Henry Foster's Baptist faith, and a short calendar of the week's religious highlights.

That was just page one.

Page Two profiled a local house of worship, listed personnel changes among local clergy (helpful in sorting out Dallas' 3,500-plus houses of worship), and a quote-of-the-week from a local clergy person. Also listed were the month's holy days, including fetes for Buddhists, Baha'is and Zoroastrians. In addition, there was a weekly planner listing religious meetings, special events and speakers.

Page Three was a "good works" page, usually profiling someone involved in helping the needy.

"We think there's a hunger for news that explores the spiritual life of the community," Mong notes. "When you look at stories with religion themes, you often find there are a lot of bridge builders in your community working to solve problems. Every issue isn't just one conflict after another, but they are actually issues being addressed by people working in good faith trying to deal with these complexities."

"People are really happy that we are approaching religion coverage like we cover business and sports," says section editor Sharon Crigsby. "All the most critical issues of our time have religious components."

Other pages included local and guest columnists, letters to the editor and wire stories from Religious News Service. Page Six listed extensive religious TV programs in Dallas and previews visiting religious artists and

Recipe For Success

At the rejuvenated Atlanta Press Club, boozing is passé, and journalism programs are de rigueur

by George Garneau

THE ATLANTA Press Club lacks a bar — but not members.

Despite its nondescript headquarters — a couple of rooms in the CNN Center shopping mall, down the hall from a convenience store — the club is resurgent, a glaring anomaly at a time when press clubs around the country are fading into oblivion, victims of shrinking city press legions and changing journalistic culture.

The 30-year-old Atlanta Press Club, on the other hand, boasts a record 555 members — two-thirds of them working journalists. The rest are public relations practitioners, students, academics and retirees.

The prosperity is relatively recent, however. It took a "revolution" to turn the club around, said past president Maria Saporta, a business columnist at the Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

By the late 1980s, the club was floundering. "It had become a PR club, as opposed to a journalists club," Saporta said. "No self-respecting journalist would be caught in the press club," she said, not even her.

Then the journalists arose, led by Anita Sharpe, a Wall Street Journal reporter. They raised dues for PR members to $150 a year, five times the $30 journalists pay, and revoked voting rights of PR members, two of whom sit on the club's 18-member board.

And the club was lucky to find a benefactor in CNN president Tom Johnson, a refugee from print journalism who has been a strong supporter and allowed the club free office space.

The club's new strategy hinged on hiring an executive director, rejecting the idea of a costly bar operation, maintaining a ratio of two journalists for every PR person, holding down dues for journalists, and a strong agenda of programs.

Meet the Bureau Chiefs:

How Does Atlanta's Story Play Around the World?

The Atlanta Press Club and the Public Relations Society of America are jointly sponsoring a program so their members can meet the men and women who cover the Atlanta beat and beyond.

How do bureau chiefs and correspondents view Atlanta? What are the big issues? How will Atlanta look to the outside world before, during and after the 1996 Olympics? Here is your chance to hear the answers from the people making the decisions from their news bureaus in Atlanta.

Among the people who have agreed to attend are: Jerelyn Eddings, U.S. News & World Report; Rick Bragg, New York Times; Darrell Calhoun, CBS News; Kevin Salwen, Wall Street Journal; Eric Harrison, Los Angeles Times; Adam Levy, Bloomberg Business News; Ben Brown, USA Today; Vern Smith, Newsweek; Rex Granum, ABC News; Scott Norwell, Time, Inc.; Frank LoMonte, Morris News Service; Leslie Baylor, Life Magazine; Betsy Goldman, CNN Central Bookings and others.

Forum on Reporting in Black Community Draws a Crowd

Intense discussion of local social issues highlighted the Press Club's May Second Tuesday program, "Covering Sensitive Issues in the Black Community." The round-table discussion was launched with samples of local television coverage of Freaknik, which provided an overview of the challenges the event posed for Atlanta media.

Among the issues discussed were portrayals of African-Americans in the news, difficulties in reporting sensitive stories, local "sacred cows" and the recent controversy at the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Non-Violent Social Change. King Center President Dexter King, who attended the program, praised the forum as a rare and valuable discussion between blacks and whites which would happen only in Atlanta.

Other featured panelists were CNN Southeast Bureau Chief Graylian Young; WXIA anchor Angela Robinson; Mike King, Atlanta Journal and Constitution AME for local news; John Blake, Atlanta Journal and Constitution civil rights reporter; WSB weekend anchor and reporter Sandra Bookman; WAGA Managing Editor Rod Fowler; WAGA News Director Budd McEntee and others. Thanks to everyone who participated in this important and informative program.

While a lot of PR people initially fled, plunging membership to about 200, the ranks have since regenerated.

"It's become a true journalists club," Saporta said. "Most PR people will tell you that it is a far more valuable club because they have true interaction with journalists."

There is no bar in the club proper — because journalists simply don't booze it up as much as they once did — but in deference to the drinkers, the club also meets at its unofficial watering hole, Manuel's Tavern.

In the main, the drinking life is part of "the old press club of the past," said president Karyn Greer of WGNX-TV. "Now people want to get something. They want to better themselves."

So the club has become "more program-oriented." Programs involve print and broadcast journalists, PR people, and the growing ranks of minorities.

Club presidents alternate between the print and broadcast media, and, as in the city known as the unofficial capital of African American culture, the club is diverse. Greer is black, as are five of the 18 board members.

Recent activities included a discussion of how to cover issues sensitive to African Americans and a meeting with the Public Relations Society of America and Atlanta bureau chiefs.

It is planning an anniversary of the celebration of racial diversity in journalism (Unity 94), a study of employment practices at local news organizations, and a guide to the city for journalists covering the 1996 Summer Olympics. It is also trying to organize a presidential debate with CNN and Georgia Public Television.

By the late 1980s, the club was floundering. "It had become a PR club, as opposed to a journalists club," Saporta said. "No self-respecting journalist would be caught in the press club."

The club has reached out to local news organizations to become corporate sponsors of scholarships and programs. And where once a few members involved themselves in activities, "now there are a lot of worker bees," Saporta said.

Then there are also more tradition-

More Cost-Cutting Measures For Times Mirror

More staff reductions in wake of New York Newsday closing

by M.L. Stein

IN THE WAKE OF its closure of New York Newsday, Times Mirror Corp. (TMC) announced a series of new cost-cutting measures, including dropping more than 1,000 employees from its seven newspapers.

Seven hundred of the staff reductions will be effected at the Los Angeles Times, although 230 jobs there previously were eliminated through voluntary retirements.

Times spokeswoman Laura Morgan said that about 450 more employees — 130 to 160 in editorial — will be slashed from the payroll through voluntary retirements, buyouts and layoffs. More than 750 jobs vanished with New York Newsday's shutdown.

Layoff notices were given to Times employees beginning July 21. Full-timers whose positions were eliminated received a severance package of up to one year's pay, health benefits and outplacement assistance.

In addition, the Times announced it will drop three sections: the Sunday City Times, aimed at inner city readers; Nuestro Tiempo, the weekly Spanish-language tabloid; and the Tuesday World Report. Also to be cut is the paper's Washington Edition, a streamlined version of the Times, published Monday through Friday for East Coast distribution.

The excised sections have contributed to the Times status as a world class newspaper, which it has striven for years to be.

Other parings include the paper's twice-weekly Westside section, which will be replaced by a new local news section to be produced by California Community News Corp. (CCN), a Times Mirror subsidiary that publishes community papers in Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

"We are confident that these actions will allow us to focus and have the resources to fund new growth opportunities at our strong, vibrant franchises."
— Mark H. Willes, Times Mirror president and CEO

"Over the past few years, the Times and its people have done a superb job of adapting our paper to Southern California's dramatically changed economic conditions and producing top-quality journalism," said publisher Richard T. Schlosberg III. "We still face softness in the Southern California economy and dramatic increases in newsprint are adding to our financial pressures."

Schlosberg said the Times will concentrate its resources on the main paper and its "sizable regional franchises."

He termed the expunged sections unprofitable, but said that the Times planned to provide much of their news and advertising in other formats.

In reference to job eliminations, he noted that the Times' news department will still total over 1,100, one of the largest of any U.S. newspaper.

In a letter to the staff, editor Shelby Coffey III said the paper's strategy will be to focus on the Times' "strengths as a strong provider of news, analysis, investigative and literary journalism. We will have to concentrate on the main paper, and not add as many sections as our natural creative urges might lead us to."

Actually, the Times' downsizing began in 1990 with a number of cost-cutting initiatives that included a 29% staff reduction throughout the paper.

Among other steps were restructuring press operations, consolidating circulation delivery agent centers from 250 to 49, folding the San Diego edition, and discontinuing three weekly suburban sections.

Times circulation today is 1,058,498 daily and 1,457,583 on Sunday.

In its announcement, Times Mirror said it plans to "refocus resources" on its core newspaper, professional information and magazine businesses and to improve its financial performance.

Other money-saving measures, according to the notice, will be the closing of Times Mirror's corporate Washington, D.C. office and the ending of funding, by year-end, for the prestigious Times Mirror Center for the People & the Press.

Previously eliminated was Times Mirror Multimedia, the company's consumer multimedia group.

Times Mirror recently announced it will fold the Baltimore Evening Sun in September. That announcement came as the company reported a sizable drop in second-quarter earning profits.

"We are beginning a series of carefully designed actions intended to reduce costs and redirect the company's resources to build on its core strengths," explained Times Mirror president and CEO Mark H. Willes. He defined Times Mirror's core businesses as newspapers, magazines and electronic information sources.

Willes said the company will be reviewing all its administrative functions and non-core business initiatives and assets "in order to bring costs into proper alignment and to generate appropriate returns on these assets."

Willes, who joined Times Mirror in June from General Mills, termed the changes as part of a "major profit improvement program."

However, the company said it will continue development of electronic products such as its online TimesLink service and Newsday Direct.

The plans include the future introduction of Med One, an Internet-based medical online service for physicians, it was reported.

Willes also disclosed that the company is considering expanding its cable television system and is discussing the broadening of its channels with potential investors.

"While the first stage in the redirection of the company involves sharp expense reductions and resource allocations, we cannot save our way to prosperity," Willes said. "We are confident that these actions will allow us to focus and have the resources to fund new growth opportunities at our strong, vibrant franchises."

The Times Mirror chief calculated that the company's moves will allow it to meet its 1995 earning expectations, despite increased newsprint costs and dips in advertising in its newspaper markets.

At the same time, Times Mirror's board of directors approved a program to repurchase in the open market up to 10% of the company's common equivalent shares. This would represent approximately 12.8 million shares of the 128 million shares outstanding on June 30, 1995.

Willes indicated the decision reflected the company's confidence in its long-term prosperity.

"The company has a very strong balance sheet, with its lowest long-term debt level in more than 15 years," he stated. Times Mirror's core newspaper properties have a strong free cash flow capacity, he added.

Because of an expected decline in interest income, the company does not anticipate the new program will add to earnings per share in the short term, Willes said.

"But over time," he went on, "it will be an important factor in providing the types of returns our shareholders are entitled to expect."

In addition to the Los Angeles Times, Times Mirror publishes Long Island Newsday, the Baltimore Sun, Allentown (Pa.) Morning Call, and the Hartford Courant, Stamford Advocate and Greenwich Time in Connecticut.

Times Mirror reported that income from continuing operations in the second quarter of this year was $26 million or 11¢ a share, after preferred dividend requirements of $13.8 million. This compares $32.1 million or 25¢ per share in 1994.

The company pointed out that the prior-year includes income from sold cable operations totalling $13.3 million or 10¢ a share.

Freedom Forum to honor deceased journalists

A 24-FOOT-high memorial, to honor journalists around the world who lost their lives reporting the news, will be erected by the Freedom Forum as part of its Newseum in Arlington, Va.

The Journalism Memorial will initially bear the names of an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 newsmen and women who died in the line of duty, according to Freedom Forum spokeswoman Maggie Donahue.

The structure will be built in Freedom Park, a 1.6-acre area rising above the streets of Arlington. Construction is expected to began this fall.

Strike

of the Detroit News and Free Press combined newspaper. On Friday, July 21, Detroit Newspapers claimed a distribution of 559,000, including 258,000 home delivery copies. By the next day, home delivery increased to 405,000 copies and a total distribution of 658,000. Pre-strike circulation of the normally combined Saturday edition was 823,310 as of the last Audit Bureau of Circulations reporting period.

Detroit Newspapers said it distributed 900,000 copies of the Sunday Detroit News and Free Press on July 23 — or better than 80% of the normal circulation of the combined Sunday paper. Some 495,000 of those copies were home delivered, Ellwood said.

Home delivery on Monday, July 24, was 392,500, compared with 510,000 for a normal combined home delivery of the morning Free Press and the evening News. Total distribution was 683,000, Ellwood said.

Advertising continued to be thin in the combined paper, which has suffered the loss of some big advertisers such as Kmart and the Farmer Jack supermarket chain.

"We think with these distribution numbers we will be able to get some of these people back who had cold feet," Ellwood said.

There were two reports of violence July 23 at the Sterling Heights distribution facility where striking mailers and drivers represented by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters have mounted their biggest picket lines.

Detroit Newspapers reported a private security guard was shot in the face with a pellet gun, and the unions complained a picketer was brushed by a van carrying non-union employees into the facility. No arrests were made immediately in either incident.

Some 2,500 workers represented by five unions on July 13 walked off their jobs at the Knight-Ridder's Free Press, Gannett's News and Detroit Newspapers, the joint operating agency that handles business and production operations for both papers.

Since July 15, Detroit Newspapers has published a combined edition of the News and Free Press and claimed continuing progress in distributing to home-delivery and single-copy customers.

Sticking points in the strike vary from union to union. Guild members oppose company plans to replace across-the-board salary increases with merit raises decided by line editors. Mailers object to work rule and manning level proposals. Circulation workers in bargaining have resisted company plans to change from independent carriers to an agent system that would mean layoffs for about 60 Teamster members.

Unions striking the papers are Newspaper Guild of Detroit, Local 22; Newspaper Drivers and Handlers (Teamsters), Local 372; Detroit Mailers (Teamsters), Local 2040; Graphic Communications International Union, Local 289; Graphic Communications Union, Local 13; and the Detroit Typographical Union.

Magazines post decade-peak gains

ADVERTISING GAINS SLOWED sharply in the second quarter but remained strong enough for magazines to post the biggest increases in a decade for the first six months of the year.

The Publishers Information Bureau, the subscriber-supported service that tracks magazine advertising, said half-year ad revenues advanced 13.3% to $4.8 billion, as volume gained 6.7%.

Second-quarter ad revenues rose 8%, with volume up 1.1% — a drop from first-quarter increases of 17.1% in revenue and 10.3% in volume.

Realtors testing nationwide computer network

National Association of Realtors president seeks input on how newspapers can fit into the plan

by Dorothy Giobbe

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Realtors is testing a nationwide computer information network that will allow the organization's 750,000 members to access property information from around the country.

The Realtor's Information Network (RIN) is conducting beta testing this summer at undisclosed sites in Boulder, Denver, Charlotte, Detroit, Dallas/Fort Worth, and in New Jersey. Plans call for the network to be fully operational by the end of 1996.

Essentially, RIN will use existing technology to give users access to multiple listings data and computer services from all parts of the country.

The network will allow Realtors to manage real estate transactions from start to finish, providing "one-stop shopping" for home buyers and sellers, said NAR president Gill Woods Jr.

Speaking at the recent Newspaper Association of America's Classified Conference in Nashville, Woods said the goal is to offer complete access to all transaction tools and services without losing "the human touch."

If all goes according to plan, in addition to property information, RIN will have the ability to offer information about school districts, mortgage rates, environmental hazards, crime statistics, and even homeowner's insurance.

At this point, it's not clear exactly how, or if, newspapers will fit into the picture.

However, Woods, noting the close relationship between newspapers and the real estate industry, said that he hopes the two industries can work together as RIN develops.

Describing RIN as a "network of networks," Woods said that the service will provide real estate data the same way that consumers access information from online services, such as America Online, or CompuServe. Users will need a PC, a modem, and Windows operating software.

Woods, noting the close relationship between newspapers and the real estate industry, said that he hopes the two industries can work together as RIN develops.

So far, over 500,000 Realtors have signed up to participate in RIN, said Edward Evans, the network's president and CEO. Also, RIN has signed "partnership agreements" with 20 major suppliers, who will provide products and services such as MLS information, software and hardware.

"RIN's entire purpose is to take existing technology and apply it to the business — without forsaking the human touch — it's high tech and high touch," Evans said.

"RIN's mission is to make certain that the Realtor has easy and affordable access to all of the relevant information necessary to affect a transaction — to enable the Realtor to move from a sales agent today to a consultative person tomorrow," Evans added.

Evans called on newspapers to offer suggestions and input on how they could fit into the network.

"RIN wants to encourage partnerships," he said. "We're about the dissemination of information and when I look around this room I see content-rich information."

"Frankly, it would be my wish that we can have significant partnerships with the newspapers and news services that you represent," Evans added. "I see no reason why many of those represented here could not put their products and services on RIN and interface your own networks to RIN."

In response, NAA Classified Federation president Dean Welch said the federation plans to be involved with the network as it develops.

RIN is part of the NAR's push to apply existing and emerging technology to the real estate industry. And, Woods and Evans agreed, it's all designed to help the industry become more effective.

House-hunters, who search for a home for months from the backseat of a car, will soon "go the way of the dinosaur," Woods said.

Instead, consumers will save time by previewing properties on a computer screen in a real estate office. Pictures on a screen cut down on search time and properties can be eliminated in minutes, rather than days.

After finding and visiting a property they like, buyers will be able to go back to the computer to obtain information about mortgage rates, appraisals, and loans that they might qualify for.

Some of the needed technology already exists.

Developments are occurring at a rapid pace, and it's important that the newspaper and real estate businesses are aware of new capabilities, Woods said.

Washington Post debuts its Digital Ink online service

by William Webb

THE WASHINGTON POST joined the ranks of some 280 newspapers already online worldwide when it debuted its Digital Ink online service July 17.

What took the Post so long?

The decision to go with Ziff Communications' platform, which became AT&T's Interchange, slowed development.

Touted as a "next-generation" commercial service, Interchange offered the Post some attractive advantages over America Online (AOL), Prodigy or CompuServe.

But Donald K. Brazeal, editor and publisher of Digital Ink Co., admitted "the technology was slower to develop than we expected."

Even when the Star Tribune of Minneapolis-St. Paul launched its Star Tribune Online on Interchange, June 18, Digital Ink decided to wait another month, due to concerns about "stability and speed from a user's perspective," according to Brazeal.

Interchange promised to be a publishers' medium, and the platform does offer some significant enhancements that may convince Post aficionados it was worth the wait.

At first glance, users are likely to appreciate a better look and feel than other online services, since the Interchange user interface incorporates more sophisticated design elements and graphics.

The Post had promised that its online service would look more like the Post — and less like a subclass of AOL.

"We didn't want to be a storefront in someone else's shopping mall," Brazeal said.

Interchange fulfills that promise and provides a more flexible, seamless environment to publishers. Subscribers to Digital Ink arrive at the Post's content as soon as they log on. And it looks good, with thumbnail photos, section heads and a sidebar list of hyperlinks.

Then again, because the icons are generic to Interchange, users may not notice a significant difference between the layout of Star Tribune Online and that of the Post's Digital Ink.

More importantly, Interchange carries with it the limitations built into all online services, including Internet. Graphics still take time to download, and the layout can't compare to Page One of an old-fashioned newspaper.

Interchange deals with these limitations by using small photos and vector-based graphics that come up fairly quickly. For subscribers who are still impatient, its multi-tasking ability lets users download files while they're reading other articles. And users can close their phone connections and read items off-line without saving them.

Another feature enables Digital Ink to sign on at any time and to download or update information automatically, so that, for instance, one could log on in the morning after downloading overnight.

The much-touted "Daily Me" is partly realized by Digital Ink, as user-defined task lists and automatic update folders effectively customize information.

But there's another built-in limitation besides bandwidth; let's just call it brainwidth. According to Brazeal, many users have difficulty using all the features that are available.

"We see that we're going to have to be constantly teaching people about what's on the service and how to use it on an ongoing basis," Brazeal said.

The service offers deep content, as well as its technological enhancements.

Many newspapers have agonized over whether to replicate the newspaper online or to provide entirely new, community-based content. Digital Ink does both.

The service offers all the local information that won't fit in the newspaper, such as subway maps and fare information, the sports schedules of 15 area high schools and crime statistics searchable by street. Eventually, once security measures are in place, Digital Ink hopes to turn over the publishing tools to the local school systems so that they can create and code their own content.

Digital Ink aims to be the "one-stop place to come for information." To fulfill that goal, the service has partnered with concierge and travel services. A restaurant listing is already in place, complete with menus.

"We didn't want to be a storefront in someone else's shopping mall," Brazeal said.

Rockwell asks for anti-dumping duties

Names competing Japanese, German press manufacturers in petition to Commerce Dept.

by Jim Rosenberg

ROCKWELL INTERNATIONAL Corp. has asked the government to slap duties on newspaper printing presses imported from foreign manufacturers for redress of what its Graphic Systems division president, Robert Swift, called "an egregious case of dumping to gain market share."

In an anti-dumping petition filed June 30, Rockwell asked the U.S. Department of Commerce to impose import duties of 165% and 67% on presses from Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd. and Germany's MAN Roland, respectively.

Rockwell said both companies export presses to the U.S. "at prices substantially below their cost of production." Sale of presses "at substantially less than fair value" causes "material injury to the U.S. industry," according to Rockwell.

Also cited in the petition were Koenig & Bauer-Albert, Würzburg, Germany, and Japan's TKS, which sells presses in the U.S. through TKS (U.S.A.) Inc., Richardson, Texas.

In announcing it had filed the petition, Rockwell highlighted the purchase earlier this year of eight 12-unit Mitsubishi tower presses, referring to the loss of "the largest single sale for the next several years."

According to the pressmaker's U.S. unit, Mitsubishi Lithographic Presses U.S.A. Inc., the sale is not only the biggest of its five to U.S. newspapers, but is also the first keyless offset sale in this country and the first sizable order for color towers rather than satellite units (E&P, June 24, p. 10).

The petition also was filed with the U.S. International Trade Commission, which Rockwell said will issue a preliminary determination of material injury or threat to the domestic industry on Aug. 14. Anti-dumping duties, it said, may be imposed 160 days after the filing.

"The imposition takes a long time, but a very, very preliminary determination is made in 45 days," Rockwell senior vice president, general counsel and secretary William J. Calise Jr. said.

According to the Wall Street Journal, the Commerce Dept. supports about nine of 10 complaints of dumping, which the paper said is ordinarily enough to make importers raise prices rather than face steeper duties in the event the ITC agrees. The Journal reported the ITC finds injury to domestic industries in about half the cases it reviews.

"It's going to basically eliminate competition for the next year and a half," said Seki.

Calise said much of the evidence contained in his company's six-inch-thick printed submission to the Commerce Dept. are expense calculations that estimate the competitors' production costs.

"We've got a lot of information because, for example, in Japan we produce presses, we know what it costs," said Calise, noting that Rockwell operates plants in Japan and in Europe.

"Of course, we know what we bid, and we know we lost, so we know theirs is below that," he said of competition for press sales. Confidential information in the filing includes Rockwell's own cost data and affidavits from Rockwell and unnamed "outsiders," according to Calise.

Offering relative rather than absolute numerical price comparisons, Calise said that the anti-dumping duties sought by Rockwell represent amounts required "to get us even."

"This one is not a close case," he continued, calling the alleged dumping "astronomical," even if Rockwell's numbers are off by as much as 20%.

Recent appreciations of Germany's mark and Japan's yen against the dollar have made those countries' exports more expensive in the U.S. The yen's rise has been especially dramatic. From early 1994 to early 1995 its value in dollars increased 25% to a 50-year high.

"Maybe when they started bidding it was only a third below their cost," said Calise, "but by the time it got done, with the yen going where it went, it was two-thirds below their cost."

Rumor of low Mitsubishi bid for the Post's business had been circulating since last winter. A week before Rockwell filed its petition, a representative of a pressmaker that competes in the Asian market told E&P that Mitsubishi's bid to the Post was believed to be 30% below what the dollar amount would have been — excluding the appreciation of the yen over the prior 18 months.

Calise's assertion that the requested duties represent the amounts needed to compensate for underpricing would mean MAN sold presses for as little as 60% of their fair market value and that the Post bought its presses for just under 37¼% of fair market value.

At Mitsubishi's headquarters in Lincolnshire, Ill., newspaper sales vice president Mike Takahashi could not be reached for comment. Sales manager Ronald Ehrhardt Jr. (formerly a MAN Roland sales manager) was traveling. An assistant in the sales department said only that "at this time they're not prepared to comment."

Managers at MAN Roland Inc., North Stonington, Conn., and at KBA-Motter Corp., the York, Pa., unit of KBA that is mostly involved in building and selling newspaper flexo presses, declined to make any initial comment.

TKS referred all questions to its lawyer, Hoken Seki, who is in charge of international practice at the Chicago offices of Milwaukee-based Foley & Lardner.

Noting that the pairs of German and Japanese press makers "were all cited together as a group," Seki said he spent a week trying to convince Rockwell to drop TKS from its complaint because his client has not sold a complete press in the U.S for the past six years. He also said he knew of no evidence of dumping in press upgrade work by TKS. Seki said Rockwell had given him no definite answer.

While acknowledging that such matters are not within his area of practice, Calise said he understood that importers named in an anti-dumping petition either supply information the government requests "or they get hit over the head. I don't think they have any choice in the matter."

If they don't meet Commerce Dept. requests for information, he said, the agency would probably rely on Rockwell's information.

Within two weeks of the filing, the Commerce Dept. had contacted all those cited in the petition, according to one press manufacturers' executive familiar with the document.

The ITC sent TKS a book-length questionnaire and gave the company 10 days to compile all the requested information, which remains confidential, according to Seki, who remarked, "the deck is stacked against you right from the start."

With what he views as "a very slight threshold" needed to show injury from dumping, the lawyer for TKS said he expects the ITC will deliver a preliminary finding of injury to Rockwell.

He said TKS is unaware of any such injury, and that if the matter is referred to the Commerce Dept., he is confident it will impose no anti-dumping duties owing to a lack of full-press sales by TKS in the U.S. during the time in question.

Calise said Rockwell had been observing its competitors' practices for some time.

"I think we're looking back four years," he said of the petition's purview, calling it longer time than for most complaints because of the nature of the newspaper press business — sales of a relatively few large and expensive items over the course of several years.

"There are not a lot of sales," he said. So to get a track record we're going back a couple of years — more than people normally do. These are not widgets."

According to Calise, the petition was filed and announced in the few days between the closing of the annual Nexpo newspaper technology conference and exposition and the Fourth of July holiday because "that's when we got it done."

He said the matter was in the works for some time, with Rockwell studying it "informally" before the Post's May announcement of its press purchase — "because we were told that we lost more than a month before that." He characterized that big order, however, as "the straw that broke the camel's back."

"You basically say enough is enough. How many times are you going to get hit over the head before you do something about it."

"You basically say enough is enough. How many times are you going to get hit over the head before you do something about it. It was not only the magnitude of the order, but the magnitude of the dump," said Calise.

The Rockwell executive also said the petition and its timing were unrelated to recent U.S. government threats against Japanese auto makers or to Kodak's complaints about rival Fuji.

He said the issue for Rockwell is entirely different than that of the auto makers and Kodak, which seek access to Japanese markets, though he allowed some similarity to an earlier Kodak complaint that Fuji had been dumping film in the U.S.

But in the U.S. market, said Seki, it is Rockwell that has "a monopolistic position, and they're trying to enhance that." In view of its market share — which he estimated at just over 90% — Seki called Rockwell's petition "the height of chutzpa."

"This is having a chilling effect on these four other press manufacturers," said Seki, noting that they are the only four in the world that provide the largest presses to U.S. newspapers.

Seki returned to his "stacked deck" proposition to explain the unfairness of the process, which he said presumes guilt and expects proof of innocence. If duties are imposed, importers are basically priced out of the market until the duties are lifted — which, of course, is the point of what Seki calls a "protectionist" measure. But before even a preliminary determination is made, he said, cited competitors cannot price their products because they do not know what duties, if any will be levied. The long process can kill sales for companies that are ultimately not found to be dumping products.

"It's going to basically eliminate competition for the next year and a half," said Seki. While that may hurt customers during that time, Seki said the only issue before the government is harm to the double-width newspaper press manufacturing industry in the U.S. — which is Rockwell. ■E&P

Fate of Rockwell Graphic Systems?

Press maker denies seeking a buyer; analysts anticipate eventual sale

by Jim Rosenberg

THE MARKET FOR newspaper presses may be returning, but one thing that hasn't changed since Nexpo 93 was this spring's rumor of the impending sale of part or all of Rockwell Graphic Systems.

In this DRUPA year, however, the rumor mill worked both sides of the Atlantic, with similar for-sale reports filtering back from the gigantic graphic arts equipment show in Germany.

A Rockwell Graphic Systems spokesman said the printing equipment manufacturer is not for sale, in whole or in part. He added that he was unaware of any interest in selling the business.

The annual "Who's-buying-Atex?" game ended late in 1992 when Kodak sold its subsidiary, which was resold earlier this year to a foreign systems vendor. Since then, the buzz switched from the big-name, one-time market leader in publishing systems to the big-name, market leader in newspaper printing equipment.

Assuming the last big U.S. press maker was to be sold, likely suitors in this case also would be foreign companies, the biggest competitors being German and Japanese.

While Graphic Systems' printing equipment constitutes a small part of Rockwell International's business compared with the corporation's other segments, it is a part of the company that never depended on military or other government contracts. And in the face of federal budget cutting, Rockwell's reliance on those contracts has diminished.

Rockwell now derives almost two-thirds of its revenues from commercial and international sales. Graphic Systems sales have increased, with earnings boosted by sales of higher-margin large newspaper presses in the first half of its current fiscal year.

Few securities analysts that follow Rockwell responded to inquiries concerning the fate of its Graphics Systems business. One who said he would like to see it sold, Lior Bregman of Oppenheimer & Co., New York, noted Rockwell's intention to consider divesting itself of under-performing businesses.

Pointing to the "series of management changes . . . over the years" at Graphic Systems, Bregman said "it makes sense to expect that if they can pull something like that off, they would consider it."

Rockwell now derives almost two-thirds of its revenues from commercial and international sales.

Another analyst, asking not to be named, had "wondered for a while" if Rockwell would sell Graphic Systems. "Divestiture makes sense," said the analyst — who, although "pretty confident" of its eventual sale, was uncertain who would buy the business in a market that has been depressed for some time.

Both analysts agreed that the size and nature of Rockwell's graphics business fit poorly into the corporate picture.

"They have trimmed down the graphics business quite nicely to a level that it's profitable," said Bregman. "But it's kind of a small player and doesn't seem to fit the high-technology diversification that Rockwell has been taking."

Given Rockwell's direction, Graphic Systems is "becoming kind of a vestigial organ," said the other analyst, who added that it does not correspond to the company's growth plan, with margins and growth potential both "very low" and "tending to negatively affect its mix" of businesses.

Despite improving sales of presses, Bregman does not believe Graphic Systems makes more sense for Rockwell since its successful turn away from heavy reliance on government and military work "I always felt that it doesn't fit," he said.

As an analyst, he said he would be pleased to see Graphic Systems sold because Rockwell's capital "would be better deployed" in such areas as industrial automation, avionics and telecommunications — "growth areas of technology . . . where they have significant competitive advantage, as well as in the defense area, where they could beef up declining sales."

More broadly, the other analyst said there are "some deep-seated questions" about the press manufacturing industry's viability when "everything is eventually going to be done on computers."

In the long view, the analyst concluded that Graphic Systems is probably viewed as "sort of the old skin . . . part of the old Rockwell that they have yet to sort of shake off . . . . "

After the newspaper industry's worst market conditions in decades, Graphic Systems boosted its contribution to total Rockwell sales from 4% in fiscal 1993 to 6% last year. Comparing 1994 results to those in 1984, however, Rockwell reported Graphic Systems sales advancing 119%, second only to its electronics segment, which was up 145%.

In absolute terms, however, the picture is not as bright. Midway from 1984 to 1994, Graphic Systems sales hit a high that exceeded $1.1 billion. But sales in 1994 rose only $23 million above the $632 million recorded in 1993. The effects of streamlining operations, however, more than doubled operating earnings in 1994, when they rose to $31.2 million from $14.8 million

Rockwell-DEV Bleak House saga continues

Trial court judge reaffirms ruling on injunction; case involving Tensor now moves up to appeals court

by Mark Fitzgerald

THE FEDERAL TRIAL judge who presided over Rockwell Graphic Systems' 11-year legal pursuit of makers of clones of its popular Goss Community printing presses dealt a setback to the big press manufacturer recently.

More than two years ago, Rockwell won a trade secrets lawsuit against DEV Industries and put the company out of business.

But no sooner had DEV's manufacturing equipment been auctioned off to a new company called Tensor Inc., than Tensor began making what Rockwell said were clones of the Community.

For the better part of a year, Rockwell has argued that it was a DEV executive — former president Toshio Yamagata — who "was instrumental in the formation of Tensor," an action Rockwell maintains violated the injunction from its original DEV suit.

But in a July 21 decision, U.S. District Court Judge Ann Claire Williams sitting in Chicago reiterated her previous ruling that Yamagata did not violate the injunctions either personally or as an officer of DEV.

Williams noted that the injunction forbids Yamagata from using Rockwell trade secrets to benefit DEV.

Since there is no DEV and since Rockwell, itself, argues that whatever Yamagata did benefited Tensor, which was not a party to the injunction, the executive is not in contempt of court, the judge reasoned.

In a more detailed opinion issued last winter, Williams already had rejected the notion that Tensor was a successor company to DEV.

Rockwell's argument that Yamagata helped launch Tensor "is basically irrelevant" because whatever the executive did or did not do took place before the injunction was entered in June, 1994, Williams said in the most recent opinion.

"Moreover, the court is not persuaded that Yamagata can be held to have violated an injunction that was not yet entered," Williams wrote.

Judge Williams' decision basically clears the case out of her court — 10 years and nine months after Rockwell filed case No. 84 C 6746 maintaining that DEV had "misappropriated" a series of detailed design drawings that allowed it to clone the Community series presses and rapidly market its own versions of the machines. In December, 1992, a jury found DEV and several of its officers guilty of misappropriation of trade secrets, unfair competition and unjust enrichment, and awarded Rockwell $2,675,000 in damages.

Though it was a victor in the lawsuit, Rockwell appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit after Tensor began marketing a press similar to the Community. That appeal had been on hold until Judge Williams ruled on Rockwell's motion to reconsider her ruling that Yamagata did not violate the injunctions from the DEV case.

The appeal will run on an expedited basis, said Rockwell attorney Michael O. Warnecke, a lawyer with the Chicago firm Keck, Mahin & Cate.

The deadlines for filing briefs run throughout the summer, with oral arguments expected sometime in the fall, Warnecke said.

More than two years ago, Rockwell won a trade secrets lawsuit against DEV Industries and put the company out of business.

Newsprint use continues to fall

U.S. DAILY NEWSPAPERS continue to cut back their use of newsprint as the price of their principal raw material increases.

Consumption has steadily fallen from January, when it was but a tenth of a percent above the year-earlier level, through April, when newsprint use was 4.6% lower than April 1994. The Newspaper Association of America estimates May consumption was down 6.1% from a year earlier.

At the same time, publishers' newsprint inventories increased from levels slightly lower than last year to a 39-day supply in April — a 6.4% increase over April 1994 inventories. The NAA projects a 6.1% rise in May inventories.

North American mills have stemmed newsprint production declines in comparison with last year's levels.

Production that was down 3.8% in January narrowed by May to just 0.7% below the previous May's output, according to the American Forest & Paper Association.

Compared with last year, May production was 2% lower at U.S. mills (which slipped from April's 98.8% to 96.1% of rated capacity) and 0.2% higher at Canadian mills (where operating rates also dropped back from 100% to 98% of rated capacity).

Suppliers' end-of-month stocks also have steadily risen.

Post

The service seems well-positioned to take advantage of its promotional and advertising potential and integrates advertising with editorial, just like a newspaper. For example, a tennis story might have a sidebar advertising a local tournament.

However, Brazeal pointed out that the service clearly identifies all advertising as such, and won't let advertisers link their ad to a review.

Unlike the New York Times, which offers movie and entertainment sections on AOL but stops short of providing the entire paper or archived stories, Digital Ink provides the daily Post online in its entirety, except for some syndicated columns and display advertising. It also offers a complete archives for the paper dating back to 1986. They will be available for a "by-the-slice" charge of $.50 a story, although some current stories will hyperlink to relevant archived articles at no charge, according to Brazeal.

Like the Times, Digital Ink publishes its classified real estate ads online and will soon upgrade the text to a searchable database.

Despite the much-hyped technology of AT&T's Interchange, what makes Digital Ink most impressive is that old mantra, content.

"No one knows who's going to win in the technology race; we're in the publishing business," said Frederick G.I. Singer, vice president at Digital Ink.

Publishing online means 7 days-a-week, 18 hours-a-day for Digital Ink — soon to be 24 hours a day. An editorial staff of 18 — including a Pulitzer winner — updates the news constantly. According to Brazeal, in the beginning, editors and writers were hired with the idea that they would be repackaging the news. But as the online newsroom turned to creating original stories with constant deadlines, Brazeal said, "We realized we had to have a much higher level of journalism."

Digital Ink employs a staff of 42, including its audiotex services.

"This is not inexpensive," said Brazeal, who answered the question of cost by calling the online service "a multimillion-dollar annual investment."

"This is an ambitious undertaking, but we went into it believing that if you're going to put the Washington Post name on it, it's got to be up to that standard."

At long last, the Post is online. But what about Internet?

Brazeal believes that question will go away as dial-up services become transparent to Internet. Complete Internet connectivity for Digital Ink is slated for August. At that point, Post articles will have hyperlinks directly to Internet Web pages.

"The dichotomy is rapidly disappearing between Web and dial-up services," said Brazeal, who also preached "convergence" and "interconnectivity."

How that works with a subscriber-based model remains to be seen.

"We've trained people to believe that information should be available really inexpensively," Brazeal said.

The Post's unique, information-hungry market should work in its favor. Sixty-three per cent of Washingtonians use a computer at work and 50% come home to one. Those numbers compare to areas like the Research Triangle in North Carolina — fertile ground for the News and Observer's NandO.

It goes without saying that few papers besides the Post can deliver local news of such national interest.

In many ways, Interchange was designed with the Post in mind.

"We've had substantial influence in the business modeling we've developed," Brazeal said.

As a result, the business model looks as good as the technology for the Post, which controls the pricing for its product and also retains a larger cut of the revenue pie than other commercial services.

Subscribers who sign up before Oct. 1 can receive a charter membership to Digital Ink until Jan 1, 1996, for $5 a month, with five free hours. After Oct. 1, the subscription price will increase to $9.95 a month, with five free hours. Additional hours cost $2.95 per hour.

La. paper expands

THE NATCHITOCHES (LA.) Times has expanded its publishing schedule from two to five days a week. It now comes out on Sunday, and Tuesday through Fridday. Publisher Lovan B. Thommas said the change was made because of the aarea's recent economic growth and tourism industry.

The paper recently switched to color and enlarged its circulation staff.

Permanent digital copyright protection

NEW TECHNOLOGY THAT embeds electronic signatures, serial numbers or other information directly within photographs, video, audio or other digitally preserved creative property can be used to verify copyright ownership and detect pirating and alteration.

Digimarc Corp., Portland, Ore., said its signatures survive scanning, compression and multiple format and digital-analog conversions. It said signatures cannot be made unreadable without also harming the commercial viability of the creative property, "removing the incentive to appropriate another's work." Signatures can contain other information, such as license rights, creation data and distribution path.

A "signature" combines the information to be embedded and a random code pattern. It is added to a digitized image or other file at a very low signal level. The invisible/inaudible signature is detected "by a simple computer analysis using the creator's unique code pattern."

musicians.

A "Literary Spirit" column announced religious best sellers and combined excerpts from religious magazines, with informed commentary. Material for this page came from staff elsewhere in the paper, who have seminary or religious education backgrounds.

"I feel we've gotten a lot of cooperation paperwide, especially from the metro staff," Grigsby added. "I've been involved in a lot of sections and start-ups since 1980, and nothing has ever been greeted like this from within and outside the staff."

Planning for the product took two years.

In August 1993, Mong and Langer made the pitch to publisher Burl Osborne for expanding the religion coverage via a comprehensive section.

In early 1994, the paper conducted a readership poll about peoples' attitudes and religious involvements, and by June, they were convening 60 members of the religious community to critique the paper's religion coverage.

Meanwhile, the Nashville, Tenn.-based Freedom Forum First Amendment Center had published a wide-ranging report, "Bridging the Gap: Religion and the News Media," co-authored by Los Angeles Times religion writer John Dart and former Southern Baptist Convention president Jimmy Allen.

"We were trying to figure out how to bridge the gap," Allen said, "and looking for a pivotal pilot project with a pacesetting news organization. We were also looking for a newspaper in the Bible Belt that had a natural religions audience and a good tradition of religion reporting."

The two connected and Allen helped convene the 60-member panel.

"The News was doing an unusually good job but they were missing a great deal," Allen said.

"I was very pleased they brought the religious community in as full partners with them. There's a paradigm shift going on in newsrooms as to how important religious news is in this country," he added.

Allen is now consulting with other newspapers interested in beefing up their religion product.

"People who want to engage the reality of increasing the effectiveness of journalism have to deal with how we've been neglecting the religious dimension of the news," Allen said.

"One good [religion] writer masks a lot of neglect. People assume there is a coverage that is quality, but you need a number of people out there to cover the [religion] news around the city," he said.

The paper will test readership figures when the section is more established, Langer said, "but we're getting a lot of feedback, so we're certain it's getting a lot of readership."

As for ad revenue, Langer said, "We didn't expect there'd be significant sales connected with this subject, but there have been more than we expected."

The Jewish community is happy with the improved coverage, said Hanne Klein, past director of the Dallas chapter of the American Jewish Committee.

"They've certainly given us a lot of ink," she said.

"Anyone reading that section can tell there's an active Jewish community in Dallas, Texas."

The next step, she said, "is for, perhaps, meatier coverage, and the Dallas Morning News is aware of that and knows they need to move in that direction."

Mong concedes the section needs more depth, as only one of the three staff writers has any religion writing background.

George Mason, a moderate Southern Baptist cleric who served on the panel, said the Morning News' effort is "widely appreciated," with some reservations.

"They have all the best intentions in the world," he said, "but they don't have a working knowledge of what is going on globally in the denominations. They don't see the liability of not having a resident expert there. They need a top-flight quality religion editor whose decisions won't be undercut by management.

Still, he said, "I give these people an A- in effort. This is light years down the road," compared to other papers.

The News has given the section a travel budget, allowing staff to cover diverse events, such as the National Religious Broadcasters meeting in Nashville, and a church of snake handlers in Kingston, Ga.

"We're in the early months of this," said Mong, "and the more we do this, the better we'll get at it."

in 1993. An earlier sale that shipped this spring is an upgrade for a large daily that is equivalent to a full press order from most other newspapers. Like the Miami Herald, a partial competitor 12 miles south, the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel was an early experimenter with flexo that also ran letterpress and some offset presses and ultimately settled on offset (E&P, June 24, p. 10).

But while the Herald worked with flexo for about 10 years, the Sun-Sentinel ended flexo trials after 18 months. Its new production plant in Deerfield Beach became the first installation of a full line of Goss Colorliner presses.

The Sun-Sentinel is now growing more full-color four-high towers by stacking three more modules on a floor unit in each of its five Colorliner press lines. In all, the $13 million expansion adds 15 units, giving the paper capacity for an extra 16 four-color pages per press, including back-to-back color and section center spreads.

(Installation is accomplished by a crane that lifts units through a massive doorway cut through a wall of the plant and onto rails that run the length of the pressroom floor.)

"People are really high on it, print, broadcast, black, white," she said. "It's really developed into quite a news community. The goal, she said, is to be to Atlanta what the National Press Club is to Washington, D.C. — a place newsmakers seek out to break news.

The secret, Greer said, is listening to what members want, and so far that has helped "to make us a more close-knit community."

Cyberspace draws AAEC's attention

Editorial cartoonists hear about the pros and cons of making their work available to computer users

by David Astor

AS THE NEWSPAPER job market shrinks for editorial cartoonists, cyberspace opportunities are expanding.

It's an inviting and "byte-ing" new world for visual satirists, but one that is not without problems. Speakers discussed the good and the bad during a "Cartooning in Cyberspace" session at the recent Association of American Editorial Cartoonists convention in Baltimore.

The session was sponsored by the Detroit News, where staffer Larry Wright is helping build a World Wide Web site for the paper.

"I think the Internet is one of the most exciting things I've been involved with, and I've been in the newspaper business for 30 years," said the AAEC president-elect, who noted that the News Web site will have plenty of editorial cartoon material.

Alma Derricks

United Media's Web site, which started in April, also has plenty of this material — including the work of 10 editorial cartoonists from United Feature Syndicate and Newspaper Enterprise Association.

But the Web site, which draws 50,000 visitors and 500,000 "hits" a day, includes more than cartoons that once appeared in newspapers. There is artist commentary and background, original drawings, and more.

For instance, United senior consultant for new media development Alma Derricks logged onto the site to show the AAEC audience a series of drawings in which Henry Payne explains to computer users how he draws a caricature of President Clinton.

Obviously, there is a lot more room on the Internet than in newspapers to do that sort of thing.

Several speakers also noted that cyberspace offers the kind of interactivity that newspapers can't, such as links from cartoons to news stories, the opportunity to send e-mail to cartoonists, and so on.

Eventually, the rapidly evolving Internet will also offer better sound and video that could have a big impact on the format of cyberspace cartoons. In the meantime, computer users can see some of this multimedia material on CD-ROMs.

Two-Way Media president Robert Roback demonstrated his company's new CD-ROM entertainment magazine, Launch, which includes animation segments, interactive cartoons and other features that AAEC members could potentially get involved in creating.

Of course, cyberspace also has its drawbacks. Few artists are making a lot of money (at least yet), cartoons can get pirated, and the audience is not as diverse as the one reading newspapers.

"Not everyone can afford a computer," said self-syndicated "Nina's Adventures" cartoonist Nina Paley, speaking from the AAEC audience.

Denver Post editorial cartoonist Mike Keefe, who hosted the session, agreed. But he also noted that computers will eventually go down in price — just as TVs and other equipment did when they became more widespread.

Two other audience members, New Orleans-based political cartoonist John Slade and Dan Wasserman of the Boston Globe and Los Angeles Times Syndicate, expressed worry that the material allowed in cyberspace will become more bland as the medium grows and becomes more commercialized.

"Controversial work could be crowded out by advertisers worried about offending large demographic groups," said Wasserman.

But advertisers can keep user costs down, responded Derricks, who noted that United may allow some ads on its Web site starting this fall to help keep the site "free and available to the public — like a broadcast TV network."

For now, at least, there are some hard-hitting cartoons in cyberspace — which means the potential for libel suits.

Milt Priggee of the Spokane Spokesman-Review said staff editorial cartoonists who get sued have their newspaper to back them. But cyberspace cartoonists who get sued would probably not have enough money to mount a decent legal defense.

Panelist Norman St. Landau, a Washington, D.C.-based attorney, responded that this is a "legitimate fear," while also noting that someone who sues an individual rather than a newspaper knows that any potential judgment will be much smaller.

But Priggee said plaintiffs are not always looking for money. "They want to shut you up," he declared. "A judgment could effectively put you out of business."

Whatever the current and future problems in cyberspace, Derricks noted that cartoonists are "happy to be a part of" United's Web site.

Cyberspace, concluded St. Landau, "is a huge new market for content."

Two companies join in online agreement

TVDATA AND THE Galacticomm software company have joined forces to market their online products.

The Queensbury, N.Y.-based TVData has developed TVData OnLine, a PC-based program that allows end users to receive cable system-specific daily television listings and features for an online service.

TVData president and CEO Arthur Bassin said TVData OnLine will be "offered on the menu of interactive services available in Galacticomm's Worldgroup online software."

'Orange' cartoon is syndicated by King

A COMIC CALLED "Rhymes with Orange" has been introduced by King Features Syndicate.

The strip is by Hilary Price, who grew up near Boston and attended Stanford University. As a finalist in the San Francisco Bay Guardian's cartoon contest, she had her work exhibited twice in S.F.

Also, her cartoons have appeared weekly in the San Francisco Chronicle, as well as in King's "New Breed" package and political and college journals.

An example of "Rhymes with Orange" by Hilary Price

"Rhymes with Orange" clients include the Chronicle, Arizona Republic, Chicago Tribune, Detroit Free Press, Minneapolis Star Tribune, and Newark, N.J., Star-Ledger.

Digital color is now in 'Frank & Ernest'

"FRANK & ERNEST" has begun utilizing digitally executed color on Sundays.

Bob Thaves, creator of the Newspaper Enterprise Association comic, does the color work with a Santa Monica, Calif., digital production company called Electric Crayon.

One writer to Thaves' e-mail address said the Sunday strip now has "amazing color," and another said the comic "jump(s) off the page."

Universal appoints new vice president

THOMAS GILL HAS been named vice president of corporate development and general counsel for Universal Press Syndicate and its companies.

Gill was formerly a partner with the Kansas City law firm of Smith, Gill, Fisher & Butts, where he represented Universal since the syndicate was founded in 1970.

Thomas Gill

The Harvard graduate has also been a member of Universal's board of directors for 25 years.

Cartoon centennial is theme of festival

THIS YEAR'S CENTENNIAL of the comic strip is the theme of the 1995 Festival of Cartoon Art at Ohio State University.

Scheduled speakers at the Aug. 25-26 event include "FoxTrot" creator Bill Amend of Universal Press Syndicate, "Jump Start" creator Robb Armstrong of United Feature Syndicate, "Herb and Jamaal" creator Steve Bentley of Tribune Media Services, "Zippy the Pinhead" creator Bill Griffith of King Features Syndicate, "For Better or For Worse" creator Lynn Johnston of Universal, "Shoe" creator Jeff MacNelly of Tribune, and "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau of Universal.

Among the others slated to talk are literary/licensing representative Toni Mendez, Universal vice president/editorial director Lee Salem, Creators Syndicate executive vice president Anita Tobias, and Los Angeles Times editorial projects manager Nancy Tew.

For more information, call 614-292-0538.

Several exhibitions at cartoon museum

AN EXHIBIT MARKING the 100th anniversary of comics will be held at the Cartoon Art Museum in San Francisco from Aug. 30 through Dec. 13.

The museum will also have an Aug. 2-Nov. 8 display of new acquisitions, and an Aug. 23-Dec. 13 show of work by 17 women who do comic books.

SOUTHWEST NEWSWIRE HAS named Kathy White sales manager.

She will oversee all sales programs as well as manage the sales staffs in the newswire's office in Dallas, reopened office in Houston, and new office in Austin.

Southwest has also named Tamara O'Dell account executive in Houston and Shelly St. John account executive in Austin.

The 28-year-old newswire is based at 2301 N. Akard, 3rd Floor, Dallas, Texas 75201.

'Shagg' to Creators

"ASK SHAGG" BY Peter Guren has moved from United Feature Syndicate to Creators Syndicate.

The comic, which mixes humor and education, stars a dog who answers questions about animals. Guren (profiled in E&P, March 1, 1986, p. 36) receives more than 15,000 letters a year, with about 75% of them coming from kids.

His clients include the Boston Globe, Columbus Dispatch, Portland Oregonian, Sacramento Bee, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and dozens of other papers.

A move and awards

DAVID HORSEY OF the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and North America Syndicate will spend a year at the Hearst Newspapers bureau in Washington, D.C., starting next month.

The editorial cartoonist, who will use his new locale to give "heightened emphasis to national issues," also plans to travel the campaign trail to comment on presidential politics.

In other news, Horsey recently won a first-place award in the Best of the West journalism competition.

Another editorial cartoonist, "Berry's World" creator Jim Berry of Newspaper Enterprise Association, has received a Distinguished Achievement Citation from his alma mater, Ohio Wesleyan.

And Karen Feld, who self-syndicates the "Capital Connections" political personality column, has won three awards in the National Federation of Press Women's 1995 Communications Contest.

ELEVEN PAPERS HAVE been named winners of 1995 TV Listings Awards, a TVData contest that recognizes excellence in TV books and daily pages.

The New York Daily News finished first in three categories. Other winners included the Ann Arbor (Mich.) News, Birmingham (Ala.) News, Boston Herald, Kansas City Kansan, Munster, Ind., Times, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Richmond Times-Dispatch, San Gabriel Valley (Calif.) Tribune, Toronto Star, and the University of Illinois Daily Illini.

PMC appointments

PRINT MARKETING CONCEPTS has named Diane Flexon vice president-production and systems.

The 11-year PMC veteran was most recently systems manager at the company, based in Houston, Boca Raton, Fla., and New York City. She developed pagination for TV magazines produced by PMC and TV Update.

PMC also announced the appointments of four regional advertising sales managers. They include Jan Anderson in the West, Melissa Kumnick in the Midwest, Tricia Soape in the Northeast, and Mary Huff in the Southeast.

Five more features

GREEN GRASS SYNDICATED Features has five new offerings.

In addition to "Living With Horses" — which covers equine care, training and riding — Green Grass is now syndicating the "Family Camper" series by Clyde Linsley, "Family Health," "Living With Pets," "Stops & Shops" (on travel and shopping), and "Mixed Nuts" (containing how-to, humor, etc.).

Green Grass is based at 2972 115th St., Toledo, Ohio 43611-2838.

On a cable program

"SUCCESSFUL INVESTING" columnist Andrew Leckey of Tribune Media Services has joined the CNBC cable network as co-anchor of a two-hour morning program, "Today's Business."

Also, Leckey recently completed a fellowship at the Freedom Forum Media Studies Center, Columbia University, where he conducted research on the business implications of the multimedia revolution.

UFS writers online

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE columnists Cokie and Steve Roberts were guests on a July 18 U.S. News Online conference on CompuServe.

Catholic

But he excepted religion specialists on major papers from criticism, saying, "It's the rest of the media I worry about."

Coiro's point was taken up more strongly by Russell Shaw, information director for the Knights of Columbus, and an author whose several books include Anti-Catholicism in the Media.

Shaw complained of an "incomprehension" among some reporters about the Catholic religion, adding: "There is a real gulf of knowledge between religious people and the press. They're not speaking the same language. In some cases, there is hostility toward religion."

Ignorance of religious terminology is one manifestation of poor reporting of church activities, Shaw said. He chided reporters who wrote that Pope John Paul "conducted" a Mass in New York's Central Park. "Masses are not conducted," he pointed out. "This shows the cultural gap between the Pope and the media."

Defending the press on the panel were Los Angeles Times religion writers Larry Stammer and John Dart, both of whom were lauded by Coiro and Shaw as being notable exceptions to their complaints of shoddy religion reporting.

Stammer declared the press is doing the best job it has ever done in covering religion. But he acknowledged that even the well-informed religion writers developed by his paper, the New York Times, Washington Post and other major dailies, have not blunted the faulting of their work by some religionists.

"The term 'secular press' itself has become pejorative — like the unbelieving press, the infidel press," he said. "We in the media should be concerned because the criticism is widespread."

"The brickbats are hurled equally by Catholics, Christian Fundamentalists and Muslims," Stammer said, asking, "Could all those men and women of faith be wrong about us?"

There is no clear-cut answer, Stammer conceded. But whatever the failings of religion news coverage, they are caused by ignorance, not unbelieving, atheistic reporters, he stated.

Another reason for the sometimes adversarial relationship between the press and the religious community lies in their different outlooks, Stammer reasoned.

"Journalists are most comfortable with these things that are verifiable," he explained. "Religion is different . . . it is sometimes difficult for the media to cross the threshold of faith. These things which cannot be seen — that great transcendent absolute — may make the press uncomfortable."

Also, the panelist said, religious bodies "are frequently hierarchical and authoritative while the press is democratic and questioning. Religious teaching is often complex and subtle. The media wants things short and simple."

So, he concluded, when ignorance of religion is combined with an inability to confirm facts, journalists may be discouraged from pursuing stories about religious claims.

And often when religion is covered, it veers toward stories about religious strife, war, sexual misconduct "or an Alabama priest declaring that the murder of an abortion doctor is morally justified. That fits nicely into the traditional template."

Editors who are not "religiously literate," can compound the communication problem, Stammer said. Some may dismiss a religious element in a breaking story as irrelevant or unimportant, he commented.

Despite their differences, there is a "reservoir of goodwill for religion among print journalists," Dart said. But he suggested that the animosity felt by those on both sides could be diluted by newspapers devoting more space to accurate, insightful coverage of religion.

Dart agreed with Stammer that most newsroom problems involving religion reporting stem from ignorance, not bias.

General assignment reporters covering religion, he remarked, often ask "elementary questions" and when they don't understand what they hear, they "write around the story, practicing avoidance so they won't be wrong."

"When the paper is large enough, you will get good religion writing, although there may be a few loose cannons who are pursuing their own agenda," Dart said.

Press bashing at the convention was relatively mild compared to the pasting that Hollywood took.

A documentary movie, Hollywood vs. Religion played to a packed house at a plenary session, stirring attendees to outrage.

Michael Medved, an author and New York Post film critic, wrote and narrated the production whose theme was that Hollywood is turning out scores of pictures that put religion in a bad light and could be termed anti-religious. Using film clips, he cited such flicks as The Rapture, Godfather III, Agnes of God, Last Temptation of Christ, The Handmaid's Tale, The Pope Must Die, and Three Musketeers.

The studios regularly turn out movies that portray clergymen as "criminals, kooks or crazy," Medved said as the audience murmured approval of his remarks, and often broke into applause at his shots at the movie capital.

Hollywood, Medved said, is an "equal opportunity offender" in religion bashing, having portrayed priests as sadistic teachers, fundamentalist preachers as bigots and rabbis as clowns. Several films have suggested that "it's okay to hate God," even though polls have shown that an overwhelming number of Americans believe in God and that 46% of them define themselves as born again Christians, Medved said.

Ironically, he claimed, most of the movies he labeled anti-religious lost money.

"The brickbats are hurled equally by Catholics, Christian Fundamentalists and Muslims," Stammer said, asking, "Could all those men and women of faith be wrong about us?"

Seigenthaler, who spent 43 years at the Tennessean as a reporter, editor and publisher, noted the pressures television puts on newspaper journalists because the discussion of rumor on television sometimes makes rumors news. He suggested that editors be more selective in determining for themselves what is news and decline to run stories which have no merit.

The educators also discussed civic journalism as it is being developed by newspapers around the country.

Colette Jenkins of the Akron Beacon Journal explained how that paper's award-winning series on race relations in Akron resulted in positive changes.

Some participants voiced concern that reporters are becoming too involved when they serve as catalysts for change in their communities.

The five-day workshop was funded by the Freedom Forum and held at the First Amendment Center at Vanderbilt. Participants shared their techniques for teaching ethics to journalism students and discussed the merits of using a philosophical approach versus case studies of ethical dilemmas in the real world.

The workshop was coordinated through the University of Missouri by Edmund Lambeth. Participants came from around the nation and two foreign countries.

not tremendous, but a good regard toward working news photographers. There was always an appreciation and a good feeling.

"People nowadays seem to have an idea that the media is down on government and people. It's a pity. Those of us who are old dyed-in-the-wool newspeople just hate to see that happen.

"It comes from, obviously, there are bad apples in every barrel," he said. "But let's face it. The news nowadays is not very encouraging. There are so many murders and other things that upset the public. Unfortunately, you're either the bearer of good or bad tidings. "Those of us who go out and shoot the story as it is, are there to do a job and not put anything in the story that isn't there. Having a good eye for a good news picture is still a premium in our [business] and should be," he added.

Photographer Joe Rosenthal, who took the famous shot of the Marines raising the flag on Mt. Suribachi following the battle of Iwo Jima, noted that more important than the development of the equipment is the development of the photographer.

"In my day, a photographer was one who was, in effect, a refugee from high school," Rosenthal said.

Photographers now, he continued, study journalism courses, the social science, political science, and they become photography majors.

"I would say, and without offending my colleagues, that they're more energetic, they're smarter, and more intelligent," Rosenthal said of the professionals today. "They've studied what they're about to go into, and it shows in the types of pictures. As far as war pictures are concerned, I don't know how to put a factor on it. I would say that they're 50 times improved over 50 years ago of my time."

During the NPPA convention, Rosenthal was honored during a ceremony at the U.S. Marine Corps War Memorial, an imposing monument based on his photograph.

"For a long time, for a number of years, from time to time there would arise contention about how it was taken," Rosenthal said of the Pulitzer Prize-winning photograph. "I still rely on what I feel is the truth. It was my turn to benefit from a coming together of a number of accidental things. Some of those elements, ordinarily you'd think some of them would be in my favor and some not. In this, every element of it happened, and I reacted. It could have been any other competent photographer in that position. In which case, the poor fellow might have had to suffer through some of the [controversial] parts," he added, laughing.

"I'm satisfied now, and particularly recently, because of this — whatever the magic number comes up, 50 years — whole swarm of new journalists and the books that I have noted, they are coming up with what I consider a good and fair story about the entire, if you want to call it, affair," he said.

"The trouble is, in one or another of the books, it tends to be a little flowery about myself, almost embarrassing," Rosenthal noted.

"But how could I ever have suspected that this would go on for 50 years? I had no idea when I took it, of course, that it meant that much," he said.

of public journalism with its critics in open debate. And, it wouldn't hurt to have some scholarly assessments that are more than advocacy.

If public journalism is truly an effort to improve information and news reaching the public, it deserves the highest commendation.

If, on the other hand, it pushes the media toward a quasi-governmental role, one more appropriate for the community organizer, people should know it.

In the end, if the effort inspires greater public awareness about the content of all of our media, it will have served a noble public purpose.

Leon Carpio, IAPA committee chair Danilo Arbilla urged Guatemalan officials to investigate this "contemptible incident" and criticized the lack of attention given to other murders, attacks and harassment of newspeople there.

Arbilla cited as examples the murder last January of El Grafico columnist Alberto Antoniotti Monje, and the March kidnapping of Gerson Lopez from La Republica, incidents which still had not been explained.

"Without a firm determination to punish those responsible and to end the climate of impunity, freedom of the press will continue to be subject to violence and to be denied to the Guatemalan people," said Arbilla, editor of Seminario Busqueda in Montevideo, Uruguay.

The IAPA committee also sent a letter to Cuban President Fidel Castro condemning the "flagrant violations of press freedom and human rights" demonstrated in a series of arrests and interrogations of independent journalists.

The letter asked Castro to "cease these intimidating practices and to withdraw the iron-fisted control over Cuban news agencies and other media."

IAPA protested the July 12 arrests of Rafael Solano Morales, editor of the independent news agency HabanaPress, and Jos Rivero Garcia of the Independent Journalists Organization.

RAISING QUESTIONS ABOUT CIVIC OR PUBLIC JOURNALISM

FOR A COUPLE of years, the term civic or public journalism has been a part of the buzz at meetings of editors and publishers.

These groups have warmly welcomed this effort, which urges local news media to take a more active role by encouraging greater public involvement with public problems and setting the public agenda, as well as leading public debate.

Some argue that public journalism is a radical departure from traditional journalistic practice that aims at impartial news coverage. This has reignited a 30-year-old debate about the ethic of objectivity.

Others say this is nothing new, that community-oriented public affairs reporting has traditionally encouraged local civic progress. Cheerleaders for public journalism include university professors, foundations, some newspaper groups and others. Critics, where they exist, are mostly editors and other journalists.

Dennis is executive director of the Freedom Forum Media Studies Center, and senior vice president of the Freedom Forum.

To date, the literature of public journalism is limited, with only a few articles and two recently published books. Much, if not all, of what has been written is more the product of polemic calls to action and evangelical road shows than documentation or cogent assessment that comports with thoughtful histories of journalism.

Rarely is there a forum where questions about the public journalism debate can be candidly and openly discussed. If there were such a forum that welcomed inquiry, as well as cheerleading, here are some of the questions one might raise:

- Is there an accepted definition for public journalism?
- If so, how does it differ from conventional journalistic practice?
- What changes does this portend for the role of the journalist?
- To what extent is public journalism informed by the history of the media and by journalistic trends in community coverage and public affairs reporting? For example, what of the link between early and doctrinaire journalistic exposes and editorial campaigns that led to an ethics movement?
- How does public journalism differ (if it does) from the Communitarian movement, which has yet to get much national publicity in spite of prominent advocates and foundation support?
- Why did the Public Agenda Foundation and other civic and philanthropic groups fail to enlist journalists as advocates for their cause, while those supporting public journalism have been more successful with similar rhetoric and objectives?
- Under the premises of public journalism, how does a journalist differ from a community organizer, an honored aspect of social work that also seeks to create strategic alliances in local communities for public purposes?
- Does public journalism contribute anything original to a long-standing critique of objectivity that goes back at least three decades?
- To what extent is public journalism a triumph of critical theory and neo-Marxist critiques of the media on the one hand, or similar to "developmental journalism" advocated by Asian leaders?
- What makes civic journalism advocates think there is a link between public journalism and profitability when other news experiments have failed to demonstrate this?
- Why do critics who have historically warned that chain newspapers would lead to a homogenized press praise solid corporate support for public journalism?
- How does public journalism become a matter of corporate policy and what rewards and punishments link the boardroom with the newsroom?
- Who are public journalism's main advocates and detractors and what are their motivations? Who pays for it and why? Who does public journalism?
- Can it be argued that the best newspapers and television operations embrace civic journalism as promoted — if not defined — by its advocates?
- Does public journalism embrace "process-oriented" reporting, a notion first advanced in the 1960s over and against "event-oriented" coverage?
- What, if any, difference is there between public journalism and civic boosterism?
- What, if anything, has public journalism learned from theoretical studies of community conflict and community cooperation?
- Does public journalism create better journalism that is more responsive to defining and demonstrating the public interest?

It is time to connect the promotion

Celebrating 100 Years of the Comics

William Randolph

by Joseph F. D'Angelo, President, King Features Syndicate

There might have been newspaper comics without William Randolph Hearst, but it's hard to imagine what they'd have been like. With Hearst's aggressive support, the "funnies" thrived through the tumultuous early years and evolved into one of this country's few indigenous art forms. In the hundred years since Hearst first set his sights on the Yellow Kid, the comics have reflected and contributed to our language and culture. They've also sold a lot of newspapers. Today, 44 years after Hearst's death, the comics claim an estimated 113 million loyal readers in the United States and millions more worldwide — and that's just on Sundays.

It was the publishing magnate Hearst who grasped the potential of the earliest "Sunday funnies" and turned them into a big, booming, modern business enterprise — eventually syndicating them from New York City into America's hamlets and valleys, opening the gates for the great parade of comic stars to come. In the process, Hearst pioneered the art of promoting pen-and-ink personalities and furthered the careers of many brilliant cartoonists, while largely shaping the popular tastes of several generations of comics fans.

It was in Joseph Pulitzer's New York World that cartoonist Richard Outcault's legendary Yellow Kid made his newspaper debut in 1895, but it was Hearst's New York Journal that cannily snatched the Kid away from the rival sheet and deployed him as a key weapon in the historic newspaper circulation wars. The Kid led the charge in Hearst's trailblazing American Humorist comic supplement with its famous motto: "Eight Pages of Iridescent Polychromous Effulgence That Makes The Rainbow Look Like A Lead Pipe." Pulitzer fought back by hiring another artist to draw Outcault's character for the World. The publishers' fierce battle over the bald urchin in the yellow nightshirt led bystanders to refer to sensational, screaming-headline newspaper combat as "yellow journalism." The popularity of that expression tainted the early comics as a less-than-genteel entertainment, but it also made it clear that the "funnies" had become serious business, seemingly overnight.

The Kid holds title as the star of the first successful comic feature, but it was years before his debut that a troupe of little bears first appeared in Hearst's San Francisco Examiner, demonstrating the power of continuing characters to engage readers. Cartoonist James Swinnerton's drawings of little bears and tykes appeared only as spot illustrations, but they had personality, and they became the first comic characters to appear repeatedly in newsprint.

In 1897, having grasped the potential of compelling comic characters to sell newspapers, Hearst remembered two mischievous German lads from the picture books of his childhood — Max and Moritz, their names were — and ordered cartoonist Rudolph Dirks to create a couple of pranksters just like them. The Katzenjammer Kids were a sensation from the start, expanding into other newspapers and becoming one of the public's best-loved comic features. The Katzenjammer Kids became the first to regularly incorporate sequential narrative panels with speech balloons, further defining the modern comic strip. Mamma Katzenjammer's little troublemakers landed in court for a time as the focus of a historic comic custody battle. But The Katzenjammer Kids kept going, and the strip still appears in newspapers worldwide today. It is the oldest comic strip in syndication.

Hearst & the Comics

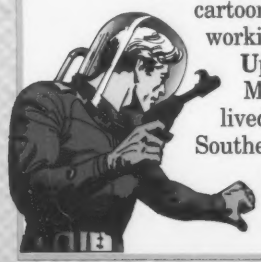
In 1900, Hearst introduced the slapstick antics of Frederick Opper's Happy Hooligan, who also became immensely popular with the public. Together Opper, Swinnerton, Outcault and Dirks are credited as the main founding fathers of the modern comic strip, but its growth was also shaped by Hearst's determination to see the "funnies" reach their full potential. By the turn of the century, other publishers across the country were scrambling to get good comics into their newspapers and experimenting with ways to present them, and Hearst continued to lead the way.

In the early 1900s, before Mutt and Jeff became the stars of the first regular daily newspaper strip, early black-and-white comics had begun appearing sporadically on weekdays in Hearst newspapers. In 1912, Hearst's New York Evening Journal introduced the first full page of daily comics on weekdays. Hearst's comic features were among the first to be reprinted in booklet form. The popularity of such reprints set the stage for modern comic books. In 1912, Hearst's International Film Service was among the pioneer animation studios, making movie stars out of the characters from the Hearst newspaper strips, including Bringing Up Father, Happy Hooligan, Maud the Mule, Krazy Kat and a raft of others.

Hearst put hit after hit into newspapers as the years went by: Blondie (which today, 65 years after its launch, ranks among the top five strips in circulation), Thimble Theater (home-port of Popeye), Flash Gordon, Tillie the Toiler, The Phantom and many, many more. Hearst sought out premier talent and paid handsomely. Many a cartoonist became a gentleman working for Hearst: Bringing Up Father's George McManus in particular lived like an emir in Southern California, always a welcome guest at Hearst's storied San Simeon estate. Hearst brought Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse into the funny papers. He commissioned the likes of Western novelist Zane Grey, mystery writer Dashiell Hammett and big-game hunter Frank Buck to create strips for him. An influx of cartooning talent swelled the "bullpen" at Hearst's King Features Syndicate, making it the MGM of the comics business. Today, with its affiliated syndicates, King Features distributes three times as many comic features as its next-largest competitor.



While Hearst expertly exploited the circulation-building powers of comics, he was also among their biggest fans. Obliged though he was to spend much of his time overseeing his empire and hobnobbing with heads of state, Hearst loved his "funnies" and followed them faithfully, keeping a paternal eye on every one. He is said to have ritually spread comic sections from a dozen different cities out on the floor each Sunday, turning the pages with his toes.

Hearst was particularly proud of George Herriman's cult-favorite Krazy Kat, which remains a favorite of artists and intellectuals, who hailed it then and now as a masterpiece of 20th century art. Although the strip never achieved more than a modest circulation, Hearst ignored financial considerations and refused to consider canceling the strip, keeping it in newspapers until Herriman's death in 1944. Hearst also deeply admired Hal Foster's epic Prince Valiant, ensuring that it ran in its original full broadsheet size in his newspapers, years after most other major features had been cut back to half-page formats, or less. Well into his 80s, Hearst insisted on personally approving new comics for syndication. One of the last strips to receive his thumbs up was a newcomer called Beetle Bailey.

King Features:

Pioneering a second century of comic masterpieces

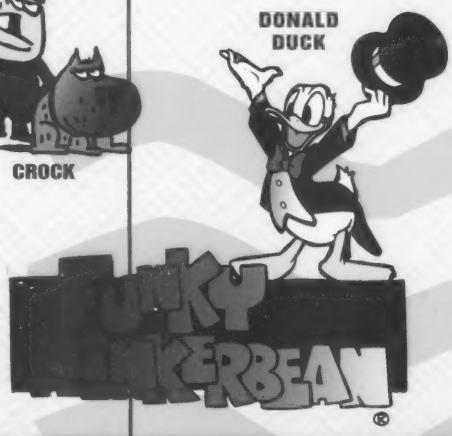
ERNIE by Bud Grace. The 1993 National Cartoonists Society award winner for "Best Comic Strip." Laugh out loud with the unpredictable bad boy of the comics. Just when you think you've seen it all, he pushes the humor one step further! Now seen in more than 200 newspapers and accessible by e-mail! D&S

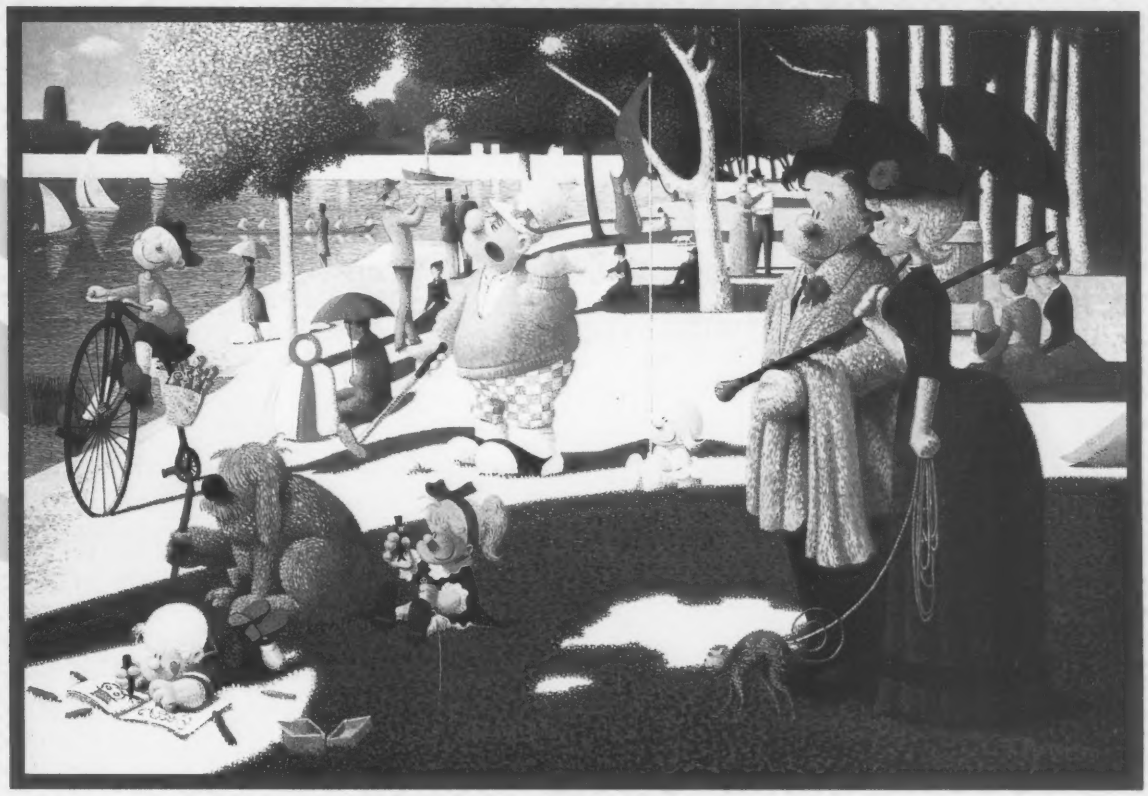
FLASH GORDON. Created in 1934 by legendary comic artist Alex Raymond, the comics' most famous intergalactic adventurer has starred in a live-action serial; novels; comic books, including a new limited-edition series by Marvel Comics; animated cartoons; and his own U.S. postage stamp. S

FUNKY WINKERBEAN by Tom Batiuk. One of the first humorous comic strips to incorporate such hard-hitting contemporary issues as drugs, guns and teen pregnancy. A new generation of characters makes Westview High more appealing than ever before. D&S

HÅGAR THE HORRIBLE by Chris Browne. He's tough! He's ferocious! He's fearless! And with a family like his, he'd better be! Created over 20 years ago by Dik Browne, this lovable Viking has developed a loyal following in more than 1,900 newspapers. D&S

CROCK





THE HEART OF JULIET JONES by Frank Bolle. Adventure is her middle name! Or maybe it's drama? Romance? D

HENRY by Don Trachte (S) & Dick Hodgins (D). The silent little lad first appeared in 1932, and although he's never said a word, he always gets his point across!

HI AND LOIS written by Greg & Brian Walker; drawn by Chance Browne. Created by the cartoonists' famous fathers, Mort Walker and Dik Browne, this successful family comic strip just celebrated its 40th birthday. Now with a "new generation" of creativity behind it to keep it fresh for 40 more years. D&S

JACK AND TYLER by Mark Tonra. NEW! Two different generations. Two different outlooks on life. One great friendship. D&S

THE KATZENJAMMER KIDS by Hy Eisman. One of America's first classic comic strips and the oldest strip still in syndication. Soon to be appearing on a commemorative U.S. postage stamp. S

JUDGE PARKER by Woody Wilson & Harold LeDoux. The jury is in. The decision? Fans love its ongoing drama and suspense. D&S

LUANN by Greg Evans. Nominated for the 1994 Reuben Award, America's favorite teen-ager is a hit with teens and adults alike. A family strip that does more than entertain; it enlightens and educates with its unique blend of humor and sensitivity. D&S

MALLARD FILLMORE by Bruce Tinsley. A conservative journalist out to ruffle a few feathers in Washington. Did we mention he's a duck? But watch out, this one shoots back in 300 newspapers! D&S

MALLARD FILLMORE

MANDRAKE THE MAGICIAN by Lee Falk & Fred Fredericks. Created in 1934 by Lee Falk, its readers have multiplied like magic! D&S

MARK TRAIL by Jack Elrod. The adventures of America's favorite environmentalist. His success is only natural! D&S

MARVIN & MEGAN

MARY WORTH by John Saunders & Joe Giella. This confidante of the comics dispenses kindness and wisdom to all who enter her life. D&S

MICKEY MOUSE

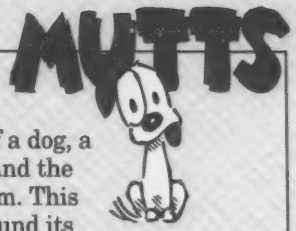
MR. ABERNATHY. Rich in personality and money, an unbeatable combination. D

MOOSE MILLER by Bob Weber Sr. When you've got a husband like Moose, raising the kids is the easy part! D&S

POCAHONTAS



MUTTS by Patrick McDonnell. The charming antics of a dog, a cat, a bird, a fish and the people who feed 'em. This new arrival has found its place on refrigerator doors and in 150 newspapers across the country! D&S

ON THE FASTRACK by Bill Holbrook. Taking office politics to hysterical new levels and beyond. D&S

THE PHANTOM by Lee Falk. Created in 1936, "the ghost who walks" battles evil in 500+ newspapers and his own animated TV series. D&S

POCAHONTAS. Enjoy the magic with this special four-week holiday series featuring all the delightful characters from Disney's newest animated masterpiece.

POPEYE. "I yam what I yam!" And that's one of the most popular cartoon characters of all time! Still adding "pop" to comics pages after all these years! D with Sunday by Hy Eisman

POPS PLACE by Sam C. Rawls. Where the special of the day is always a decent meal, good service and a hearty laugh. D

PRINCE VALIANT by John Cullen Murphy & Cullen Murphy. Created in 1937 by the legendary Hal Foster, this historically accurate and beautifully illustrated strip recently reached its 3,000th action-packed page. It has also inspired a film, color anthologies, a limited-edition series by Marvel Comics, a top-rated animated series and a commemorative U.S. postage stamp. S

RALPH by Wayne Stayskal. There's only one Ralph, and he pushes the ordinary to the extreme every day. D&S

REDEYE by Bill Yates & Mel Casson. Get ready for a laugh attack with Redeye and his wacky tribe of Chickiepan Indians! A "chief" source of laughs for almost three decades. D&S

REX MORGAN, M.D. by Woody Wilson & Tony DiPreta. Filling your prescription for drama seven days a week. D&S

RIP KIRBY by John Prentice. Created in 1946 by Alex Raymond. Multiple winner of the National Cartoonists Society award for "Best Story Strip of the Year." D

RHYMES WITH ORANGE by Hilary Price. NEW! A humorous observation of the little idiosyncrasies that push us all closer to the edge of sanity. Accessible by e-mail! D&S

SALLY FORTH

SAFE HAVENS by Bill Holbrook. Where the 6-year-olds are in control and the grown-ups don't stand a chance! D&S

SALLY FORTH by Greg Howard & Craig MacIntosh. The epitome of a working mother's comic strip. A slice of life with a sharp wit. Enjoyed by fans in more than 450 newspapers. D&S

SAM & SILO by Jerry Dumas. Small-town law enforcement with big-time laughs. D

SECRET AGENT CORRIGAN by George Evans. Created by Alex Raymond and Dashiell Hammett. His mission may be a secret, but his popularity isn't. D

SLYLOCK FOX AND COMICS FOR KIDS

SLYLOCK FOX AND COMICS FOR KIDS by Bob Weber Jr. What's the most popular kids' activity feature in the world? Here's a clue: It stars Slylock Fox! D&S

STEVE ROPER AND MIKE NOMAD by John Saunders & Fran Matera. Private investigators who live on the edge. No case is too dangerous. D&S

THE SMALL SOCIETY by Bill Yates. Politics, the economy and taxes ... Hoo-boy! D&S

TIGER by Bud Blake. Capturing the charm and humor of childhood in more than 400 newspapers. Now celebrating its 30th anniversary. D&S

ZIPPY THE PINHEAD

RHYMES WITH ORANGE

hprice@aol.com

TIM TYLER'S LUCK by Lyman & Bob Young. Need a little more adventure in your life? You're in "luck"! D&S

TUMBLEWEEDS by Tom K. Ryan. A popular Western strip that boasts more than 20 anthologies! Also a big attraction at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas. D&S

WALNUT COVE by Mark Cullum & John Marshall. A small town more and more people visit — and never leave! D&S

WHAT A GUY! by Bunny Hoest & John Reiner. He's a business-minded, serious, suit-wearing whiz. Unfortunately he's only 6 years old! D&S

WHERE'S WALDO? by Martin Handford. Loyal readers find him every Sunday in his own beautifully illustrated, fact-filled activity page. S

WILLY 'N ETHEL by Joe Martin. A perfect marriage of modern wit and traditional humor. Also available in panel form. D&S

WONK CITY by Jim Borgman. An irreverent look at life inside the Beltway by a Pulitzer Prize-winning editorial cartoonist. Weekly

PANELS

THE BETTER HALF by Randy Glasbergen. The often unpredictable yet always identifiable trials and tribulations of modern marriage. D&S

DENNIS THE MENACE by Hank Ketcham. This mischievous little rascal is into everything, including more than 1,200 newspapers in 40 languages, a classic TV sitcom and last year's motion-picture release. D&S

THE LOCKHORNS by Bunny Hoest & John Reiner. Together "till death do them part," which could be any day now. Seen in more than 500 newspapers. D&S

THE NEW BREED. Cutting-edge humor from the best up-and-coming cartoonists. D&S

THE FAMILY CIRCUS by Bil Keane. A wholesome and sentimental portrait of family life that has become the most popular newspaper panel in the world! Featured in more than 1,300 newspapers. D&S

GRIN AND BEAR IT by Fred Wagner & Ralph Dunagin. A satirical view of bureaucracy and big business. D&S

HAZEL by Ted Key. The lovable live-in maid who first appeared in 1943 has inspired a classic TV series and an upcoming movie. D

HORRORSCOPE by Susan Kelso & Adam Rickner. The zany comic panel for those thousands of readers who know their sign — and those who claim they don't! 7TW

LAFF-A-DAY. Classic humor from some of the nation's best panel cartoonists. D

OUT OF BOUNDS by Bill Rechin & Don Wilder. The 1993 NCS award-winner for "Best Panel Cartoon." When it comes to laughs, this sports-themed comic hits one home run after another. Also available in comic-strip form. D

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME by Al Scaduto. Two-time NCS award-winner for "Best Panel Cartoon." When it comes to matching humorous satire with skillful rendering, he does it every time! D&S

THE LOCKHORNS

TRUDY by Jerry Marcus. A humorous sendup of marriage, parenthood and nosy next-door neighbors. D&S

And featuring these strips for the international market:

GARTH by Martin Asbury. D • SCORER by John Gillatt & Barrie. D • THE PERISHERS by Maurice Dodd. D • MILLIE by Roger Mahoney & Andrew Pilcher. D • A MAN CALLED HORACE by Roger Kettle. D

Serving 1,500 newspapers and still growing!

Enliven your Sunday newspaper with top-quality COLOR printing!

King Features brings the best color printing of Sunday comics, TV magazines and other supplements to more than 150 newspapers. At affordable prices!

Color Comics Sections

It was a hot-metal, letterpress process when King Features started producing sections 65 years ago. Today our Sunday comics are printed with the vibrant colors and no-rub inks of flexography.

In large markets with customized sections, King provides on-site support to help generate sales of Spadeas, gatefolds and other press-fed inserts — so comics can pay their way, or better.

For smaller newspapers, King helps contain costs with a selection of top-flight generic sections and choice of formats, and absolutely the finest comic printing quality.

TV Magazines

We entered this field just two years ago — producing New York Vue for the Daily News. The magazine has since captured awards for the best use of color and top TV book in the business.

Last year, TV Week magazine of The Blade in Toledo, Ohio, became the second to switch to a Minitab™ format with unlimited heatset color, couponing and stitching on-line.

Now King Features can produce supplements in tabloid and quarterfold formats as well, as we extend our reach with timely printing into other regions of the country.

Find out how King Features Color Printing Services can help you attract readers and advertisers.

The Top Comics

'Peanuts' is chosen as the best strip of all time and 'Calvin and Hobbes' the best of today in two E&P polls

by David Astor

WHAT DO TWO boys, a dog and a tiger have in common?

Charlie Brown, Calvin, Snoopy and Hobbes star in syndicated strips that were the respective winners of a pair of E&P polls.

When respondents were asked to name the best comics of all time, "Peanuts" received nearly twice the support of the second-place finisher, "Krazy Kat." Rounding out the top five were "Pogo," "Little Nemo in Slumberland" and "Li'l Abner."

And when respondents were asked to choose the top current comics, "Calvin and Hobbes" also received nearly twice the support of the runner-up, "Peanuts." The next three finishers were "Doonesbury," "For Better or For Worse" and "Dilbert."

The surveys were conducted to mark the 100th anniversary of comics, a milestone that is being celebrated throughout 1995. A total of 103 cartoonists, syndicate executives, newspaper editors, comics historians, and others were polled.

Each respondent was asked to name the three best comics of all time as well as the three best comics currently in newspapers. First-place votes were worth eight points; second-place picks, four points; and third-place choices, two points. A few people chose two or more comics for first, second or third place, which explains the odd numbers and fractions in several of the tallies.

Hits a survey home run.

Here are the top 15 comics of all time, according to poll respondents. Included are strips still in syndication (as done by their creators or successors) and comics that are now defunct.

1. "Peanuts," Charles Schulz (1922-), United Feature Syndicate, 293.17 points.
2. "Krazy Kat," George Herriman (1880-1944), King Features Syndicate, 156 points.
3. "Pogo," Walt Kelly (1913-1973), what is now North America Syndicate, 142 points.
4. "Little Nemo in Slumberland," Winsor McCay (1867?-1934), 100.5 points.
5. "Li'l Abner," Al Capp (1909-1979), United and what is now Tribune Media Services, 93.67 points.
6. "Terry and the Pirates," Milton Caniff (1907-1988), what is now Tribune Media Services, 87.17 points.
7. "The Far Side," Gary Larson (1950-), Chronicle Features and Universal Press Syndicate, 86 points.
8. "Dick Tracy," Chester Gould (1900-1985), what is now Tribune Media Services, 48 points.
9. "Steve Canyon," Milton Caniff (1907-1988), King and what is now North America Syndicate, 47.17 points.
10. "Calvin and Hobbes," Bill Watterson (1959?-), Universal, 34 points.
11. "Prince Valiant," Harold Foster (1892-1982), King, 29 points.
12. "Bringing Up Father," George McManus (1884-1954), King, 21 points.
13. "The Yellow Kid" (also known as "Hogan's Alley"), Richard Outcault (1863-1928), 20 points.
14. "Bloom County," Berkeley Breathed (1957-), Washington Post Writers Group, 18 points.
15. "Popeye" (also known as "Thimble Theatre"), Elzie Segar (1894-1938),

King, 17 points.

Now, here are the top current comics, according to survey respondents. Ties were broken when a comic had more first-place votes.

1. "Calvin and Hobbes," Bill Watterson, Universal Press Syndicate, 357 points.

2. "Peanuts," Charles Schulz, United Feature Syndicate, 198.67 points.

3. "Doonesbury," Garry Trudeau, Universal, 156 points.

4. "For Better or For Worse," Lynn Johnston, Universal, 132 points.

5. "Dilbert," Scott Adams, United, 38 points.

6. "Mother Goose & Grimm," Mike Peters, Tribune Media Services, 29 points.

7. "The Wizard of Id," Johnny Hart and Brant Parker, Creators Syndicate, 29 points.

8. "B.C.," Johnny Hart, Creators, 28.67 points.

9. "Non Sequitur," Wiley, Washington Post Writers Group, 28 points.

10. "Hagar the Horrible," Chris Browne, King Features Syndicate, 28 points.

11. "Ernie," Bud Grace, King, 26 points.

12. "Beetle Bailey," Mort Walker, King, 26 points.

13. "Zippy the Pinhead," Bill Griffith, King, 18 points.

14. "The Lockhorns," Bunny Hoest and John Reiner, King, 16 points.

15. "Blondie," Dean Young and Stan Drake, King, 14.67 points.

Many of those polled wanted to choose "The Far Side" as one of the best current comics. "It certainly deserves a vote because the corpse is still warm," noted editorial cartoonist Steve Benson of the Arizona Republic and United Feature Syndicate. But Gary Larson's panel ended in January, so this couldn't be allowed.

What was allowed was a flexible definition of what constitutes a top comic. Many respondents voted for the "best" comics, while others picked their "favorite" ones.

When people made their all-time picks, there was obviously a tendency to remember comics they were able to read regularly during their lifetimes. So several very old strips may have lost some votes.

But newer comics did have a disadvantage. With the shrinking of strips, modern cartoonists don't have the same space that many earlier artists used so creatively.

Whatever the era of the comic, poll respondents had plenty of nice things to say about their picks. And no strip received more praise than the all-time winner, "Peanuts," which broke new ground with its simple look and sophisticated content.

"'Peanuts' totally revolutionized the comic strip," said Chronicle Features editorial cartoonist Ted Rall.

"Charles Schulz invented a brilliant style of humor — whimsical yet intellectual and strongly character-driven — that has been tremendously influential," added "Tom the Dancing Bug" creator Ruben Bolling of Quaternary Features.

"Calvin and Hobbes" has finished first in many newspaper polls — and now a magazine one.

"We were all influenced by him," agreed "Ask Shagg" creator Peter Guren of Creators Syndicate.

Bill Janocha, a freelance cartoonist and studio assistant to "Beetle Bailey" creator Mort Walker of King Features Syndicate, said "Peanuts" had so much impact on him as a child, "I can pinpoint it as the significant reason I chose cartooning as my life's work."

"It's an amazing comic strip," commented Bill Gallo, a sports cartoonist, columnist and editor at the New York Daily News. "It's just as intelligent as it is amusing and funny."

A number of other respondents said "Peanuts," while still interesting to read, is not quite as good as it used to be. This is undoubtedly why the 45-year-old comic received fewer current than all-time votes. But the United strip still finished a strong second in the contemporary category.

The current winner, "Calvin and Hobbes" by Bill Watterson of Universal Press Syndicate, started in 1985.

"It's obviously the best strip of the last decade," said Barry Gantt, who helped found the Cartoon Art Museum in San Francisco.

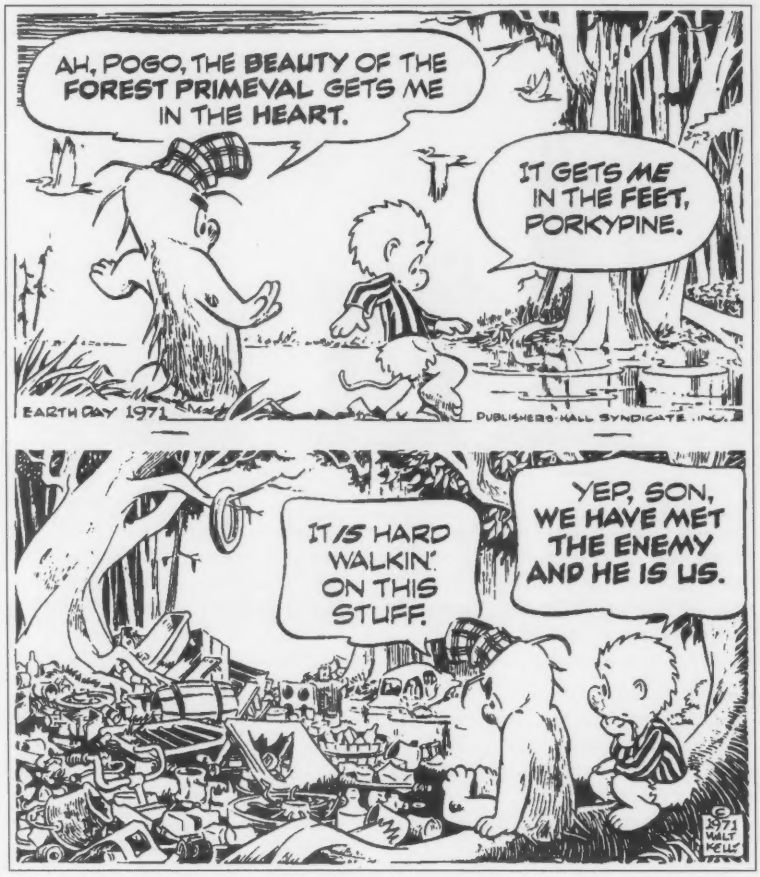
"It's just a classic," added editorial cartoonist David Horsey of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and North America Syndicate (NAS).

"'Calvin and Hobbes' combines the wonderful artwork of Milton Caniff and the marvelous imagination of Winsor McCay, and gets across the philosophical viewpoints of 'Peanuts,'" said "Non Sequitur" creator Wiley of the Washington Post Writers Group (WPWG).

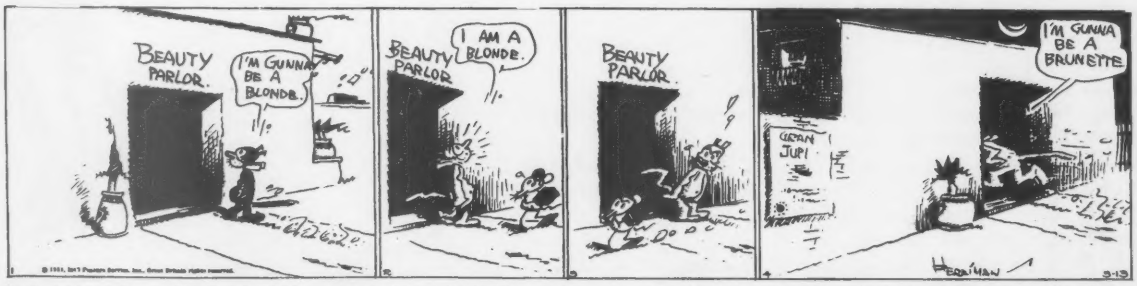
"Krazy Kat," the runner-up in the all-time category, was also heaped with praise. Several people said the King comic, which ran from 1913 to 1944, still doesn't seem dated.

"The artwork is timeless," said "Frank & Ernest" creator Bob Thaves of Newspaper Enterprise Association. "You could put it in today's newspapers and it would look contemporary."

"George Herriman was brilliant,"



This comic is reprinted from "Phi Beta Pogo," a 1989 Fireside/Simon & Schuster book edited by Mrs. Walt Kelly and Bill Crouch, Jr.



This 1931 "Krazy Kat" episode is reprinted from "The Great American Comic Strip: One Hundred Years of Cartoon Art," a 1990 Bulfinch/Little, Brown book by Judith O'Sullivan.

Part of a 1906 strip from "The Complete Little Nemo in Slumberland," a 1989 Remco book edited by Rick Marschall.

added syndication/literary agent and former United executive David Hendin.

"How did Herriman do it?" asked "Hagar the Horrible" cartoonist Chris Browne of King. "Equal parts Picasso, e.e. cummings and Freud with a half a cup of Lewis Carroll and a soupcon of the blues."

"'Krazy Kat' is like the Rosetta Stone of comic strips," observed editorial cartoonist and "Wonk City" creator Jim Borgman of the Cincinnati Enquirer and King. "Cartoonists ever since have looked to it and found the key to their own direction in cartooning."

"He invented this visual language — all those cartoon tricks everyone uses now," said greeting card cartoonist and former comic creator Barbara Dale.

"Herb & Jamaal" creator Steve Bentley of Tribune Media Services (TMS) said he loved the "social, moral, ethical and political commentary" — as well as the drawing — in Walt Kelly's "Pogo," which took third place in the all-time category.

"There has never been better political satire," said author, professor and WittyWorld magazine managing editor John Lent. "You could read 'Pogo' and forego the editorial page of the day."

"'Pogo' was groundbreaking on political subjects," agreed WPWG general manager/editorial director Alan Shearer. "And I marveled at the artwork."

While the creator of "Little Nemo in Slumberland" couldn't write like Walt Kelly, Winsor McCay's art has awed readers since the first decade of the century.

"McCay achieved a level of design, draftsmanship and color that has never been equaled," United senior vice president Sid Goldberg said of the fourth-place finisher.

"He was a remarkable draftsman," agreed Tom Gibson, a freelance cartoonist and chairman of the National Foundation for Caricature and Cartoon Art in Washington, D.C. "He created so much of the fantasy and entertainment value of cartoon art."

Coming in fifth was "Li'l Abner," which started in 1934, the year McCay died.

Several respondents commented on the memorable characters in Al Capp's strip. And author, comic book co-creator and former "Dick Tracy" writer Max Allan Collins stated, "In my estimation, 'Li'l Abner' is in a class by itself. It did everything. It was suspenseful, funny, topical, unique. Al Capp was the shining genius of American comics."

Another genius was Milton Caniff, whose "Terry and the Pirates" strip finished sixth in the all-time survey.

"His storytelling was magnificent," said author and former cartoonist R.C. Harvey. "He showed that the medium of comics could be used to tell very sophisticated, character-driven stories."

"He combined storytelling with magnificent visual art," added literary/licensing representative Toni Mendez. "Milton, I believe, was one of the first cartoonists to visualize scenes through the eyes of the camera."

"Caniff brought the sequential narrative to its fullest dimension, creating the most unforgettable cast of characters," said self-syndicated "Dinosaur Group" creator Lew Sayre Schwartz. "He probably was the most gifted and imitated cartoonist of all time . . . ."

Just as "Terry and the Pirates" had a huge impact on the continuity comic genre, the seventh-place "Far Side" opened the door for many offbeat offerings.

"I think 'The Far Side' did the most to expand the limits of what newspaper comic humor could be," said Al Leeds, president of the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service.

"It was off the wall and genuinely funny — the 'Seinfeld' of comics," added "One Big Happy" creator Rick Detorie of Creators. "And Gary Larson drew funny. Even without reading the gag, you laughed at the way he drew it."

There were some laughs in the eighth-place "Dick Tracy," but mostly a lot of gripping drama.

Milton Caniff's "Terry and the Pirates" characters © Tribune Media Services.

"Chester Gould was a spellbinding storyteller," said comics collector Shel Dorf, a former assistant to Caniff. "You couldn't wait until tomorrow's paper to see what happened."

And, commenting on "Bringing Up Father" by George McManus, King president Joe D'Angelo said, "In its day, it was probably the most hilarious strip around."

Respondents also had plenty of nice things to say about current comics that finished behind "Calvin and Hobbes" and "Peanuts," including the third-place "Doonesbury."

"I think 'Doonesbury' is by far the best-written comic since 'Pogo,'" said editorial cartoonist and "Mixed Media" creator Jack Ohman of the Portland Oregonian and TMS.

"'Doonesbury' loosened the tight strictures on what was permitted and not permitted in comics," said cartoon historian, collector and writer Mark Cohen. "It made comics more relevant."

NAS editorial cartoonist Clay Bennett compared the impact Trudeau's strip had on comics to the impact "All in the Family" had on television.

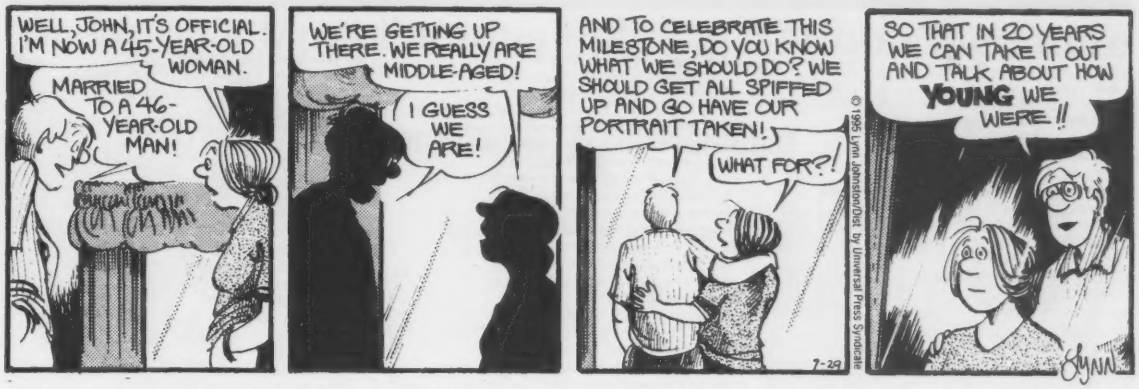
"It has had a galvanizing effect on "Doonesbury" by Garry Trudeau of Universal Press Syndicate finished third among current strips.



"For Better or For Worse" by Lynn Johnston of Universal came in fourth among contemporary comics.

people's thinking," added editorial cartoonist Signe Wilkinson of the Philadelphia Daily News and Cartoonists & Writers Syndicate.

"For Better or For Worse" may not be political like "Doonesbury," but "Curtis" creator Ray Billingsley of King applauded the "social realism" of the fourth-place finisher.

Philadelphia Inquirer assistant managing editor Bob Greenberg added that Lynn Johnston's strip offers "a true picture of family life."

"Lynn discusses topics that real-life families discuss at the dinner table," agreed "Adam" creator Brian Basset of Universal, who added: "I just marvel at how she does a humor-'slash'-continuity strip and pulls it off."

"'For Better or For Worse' is so fresh and alive every day, you feel like it's breathing," said "Hot Pink" creator Anne Gibbons of Sisters Syndicate.

The fifth-place finisher, "Dilbert," has also built a strong following since starting in 1989.

"I don't know of anyone in the workplace who can't relate to something in 'Dilbert,'" said Lexington (Ky.) Herald-Leader editor Tim Kelly. "It's the most clipped 'toon."

"'Dilbert' is the first comic strip that's come out in a long time that seems to actually have something to do with my life!" added Kansas City Star managing editor-design and features Jane Amari. "I read it everyday, and laugh out loud sometimes."

Polly Keener said she also laughs out loud reading the sixth-ranked comic, "Mother Goose & Grimm" by Mike Peters of TMS. "It's just wacky," said the cartoonist, author and college instructor. "And the characters look so funny."

Commenting on the number-seven "Wizard of Id," "Ernie" creator Bud Grace of King said, "I'm just amazed at how, after so many years, it can be as fresh as it was in the beginning."

Another Creators-distributed Johnny Hart comic, the eighth-place "B.C.," was praised by "George" creator Mark Szorady of King. "It makes me laugh every single day," he said.

"Anyone who thinks twisted, quirky, outrageous, irreverent, over-the-ozone absurdity is something new hasn't been reading 'B.C.' over the years," added "Mallard Fillmore" creator Bruce Tinsley of King.

Three other current comics, all from King, received kudos as well.

Dick Tracy Magazine publisher Andy Feighery described "Ernie" as "so outrageous and fun."

"Washingtoon" creator Mark Alan Stamaty of Time magazine said, "I love 'Zippy the Pinhead' because it's very original. It really taps a fresh vein."

And Ventura County, Calif., Star editor Tim Gallagher said, "The genius of 'Blondie' is how it has managed to stay current while remaining true to its original focus."

25 YEAR Jubilee

UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF COLUMNS, COMMENTARY AND COMICS

Dear Editor:

Universal Press Syndicate proudly celebrates its 25th anniversary this year. In February, my partner, Kathleen Andrews, my wife, Susan, and I welcomed nearly 200 creators, columnists and authors to Kansas City for our 25th Anniversary Jubilee, a weekend commemorating the tradition of excellence that Universal Press Syndicate and companies established over the last quarter-century.

The party weekend is over, but we continue to build on that excitement as we look ahead to the next century. Today, Universal Press Syndicate is the largest independent newspaper syndicate in the world. Affiliate companies such as Andrews and McMeel, OZ and Universal Belo produce books, calendars, greeting cards and television programming. The company has come a long way from that day in August 1970, at our first board of directors meeting, when one of our board members — after looking at the profit-and-loss statement — said that "at the rate Universal Press is going, the doors will be closed by March 18, 1971, at 1:22 p.m."

But our doors didn't close. Our success story led with an exclusive opportunity to sell Seymour Hersh's reporting of the My Lai massacre. Offering the syndicated version of the story before Hersh's book was released, my partner Jim Andrews and I made a deal with skeptical newspaper editors that if Hersh won the Pulitzer Prize, the price for the excerpts would double. He won. Our willingness to take such risks has been a key ingredient in our companies' success.

This year we celebrate many anniversaries in addition to our own: Doonesbury by Garry Trudeau and Outrider by Garry Wills celebrate their beginnings with us 25 years ago. Dear Abby, Pat Oliphant and Georgie Anne Geyer each celebrate 15 years in association with UPS; and the remarkable Calvin and Hobbes by Bill Watterson celebrates its 10th anniversary. We treasure the relationships we have built with these talented people and with the newspaper editors who have supported us over the last 25 years.

At the same time, we continue to help newspapers cultivate new readers and sources of revenue. An alliance with Newhouse News Service brought us Maturity News Service and Religion News Service, and produced Kiosk, the exciting one-shot and series service that offers compelling writing for every section of the newspaper. And through the dynamic newspaper-book publishing program of Andrews and McMeel, our publishing arm, we are the designated book publisher for Knight-Ridder newspapers, publishing books with The Philadelphia Inquirer, The Miami Herald, The San Jose Mercury News and The St. Paul Pioneer Press, among others. Additional publishing relationships with The Dallas Morning News, Newsday and other papers have heightened these newspapers' regional and national profiles and improved their bottom lines.

Universal Press' partnership with newspapers has even allowed us to bring our features to fans via their television screens. Our television programming division is a joint venture between Universal Press and the Belo Corporation, owner of The Dallas Morning News. In 1992, Universal Belo developed the imaginative weekly feature You Can With Beakman and Jax, by Jok Church, into "Beakman's World," now an Emmy Award-winning Saturday morning program on CBS and The Learning Channel.

The nearly 100 syndicated newspaper features Universal Press offers are only one dimension of our wide range of pursuits. Andrews and McMeel has established itself as the world's premier humor and calendar publisher. In addition, through UPS' Revenue Enhancement Program, your readers have the opportunity to enjoy books, mugs, T-shirts and calendars based on Universal properties and some of the hottest names in the gift business today.

As the 21st century beckons, we at Universal Press continue to keep our eye on the horizon. We're intent on maintaining our commitment to finding remarkable new talent, to being responsive to your ever-evolving needs, and to taking risks and accepting challenges. We will continue to try to live up to what Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Mary McGrory called us: "the syndicate with a soul."

Twenty-five years is only the beginning.

Sincerely,

John P. McMeel

Donna Britt Bonds with readers on an emotional level. Britt's very personal and conservative commentary has brought new topics and new readers to op-ed and lifestyle pages. Winner of the ASNE Writing Award for Commentary in 1994. Twice weekly.

David Broder Indispensable in helping readers understand election issues and personalities. Broder's grass-roots reporting and down-the-middle point of view enable him to give politicians their due. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Lou Cannon Discerning analysis from a veteran reporter famous for coverage of the White House and politics. Cannon offers a Western perspective on political, environmental and social issues. Based in Los Angeles. Once a week.

Richard Cohen Has the reputation of being liberal but his inquiring mind makes him unpredictable. Caused tremors in some circles by declaring that affirmative action has outlived its usefulness. Cohen tackles the tough subjects, often with biting wit. Twice weekly.

Richard Estrada An immigration and labor expert, Estrada helps readers comprehend what today's great wave of immigration means to America. A political independent, he also covers free trade, ethnic issues, politics and relations with Latin America. Associate editor of the editorial pages of the Dallas Morning News. Once a week.

Ellen Goodman With 450 newspapers, Goodman is one of the most widely read columnists in the world. She pioneered family and women's issues on op-ed pages. Readers who juggle job, family and related pressures turn to Goodman as someone who understands what they're up against. Associate editor of The Boston Globe. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Jim Hoagland A two-time Pulitzer winner, for reporting and commentary, Hoagland is the best at interpreting America's role in the new global arena. When Hoagland writes that the president has lost credibility with U.S. allies, the world takes notice. Twice weekly.

Charles Krauthammer

Charles Krauthammer With great knowledge of American history and culture, Krauthammer holds America's leaders to high standards and excoriates them when they don't measure up. He often writes on foreign affairs, which he says are much simpler than politicians pretend. Pulitzer winner. Once a week.

Colman McCarthy

Colman McCarthy Newspapers looking for a strong liberal point of view will get one with McCarthy. A vigorous human rights activist who opposes the military, the death penalty and abortion. Twice weekly.

William Raspberry

Mossprints by Geoffrey Moss Creative, distinctive and original drawings for editorial pages. His work illustrates the top issues in the news with force and drama. Ten works of art each month.

Neal Peirce As Congress shifts responsibilities to the states, Peirce travels the country reporting on programs that work. He finds solutions to social and political problems in cities and towns everywhere. Once a week.

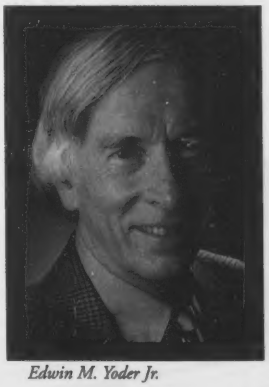
Neal Peirce

George F. Will

William Raspberry Expect solutions from this political independent whose probing commentary seeks a better, fairer world for everyone. Raspberry raises questions and poses common-sense answers. Pulitzer winner, 1994. Twice weekly.

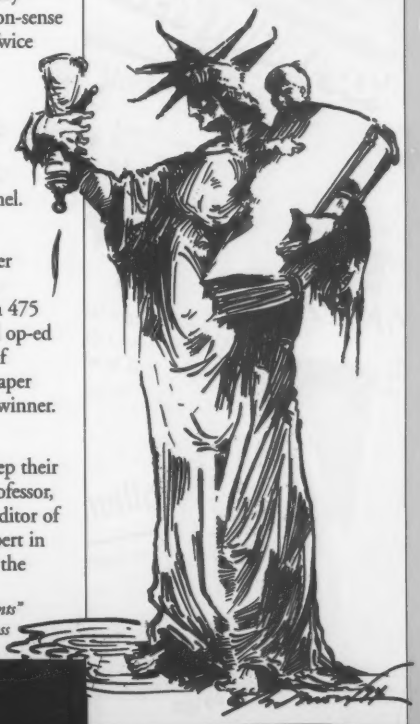
Dana Summers A conservative viewpoint, with a classic drawing style, sets Summers' cartoons apart from most others. Editorial cartoonist of The Orlando Sentinel. Four cartoons a week.

George F. Will An original thinker and unparalleled essayist, Will shapes public opinion on many issues. With 475 newspapers, he is the most influential op-ed columnist in America. Reaches tens of millions of people through his newspaper column and TV journalism. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.



Edwin M. Yoder Jr.

Edwin M. Yoder Jr. Helps readers keep their historical perspective. A university professor, historian, and former editorial page editor of The Washington Star, Yoder is an expert in constitutional law. Pulitzer winner at the Star. Twice weekly.



"Mossprints" by Geoffrey Moss

Robert Kuttner

Computer Report The Washington Post's T. R. Reid and ABC News' Brit Hume, two of the best in the business, review hardware and software, and track computer industry trends. Once a week.

Robert Kuttner Economic and political commentary with a liberal slant. Kuttner has great sources in the Clinton administration, but can be sharply critical when he feels the administration is faltering. A believer in strong, efficient government. Once a week.

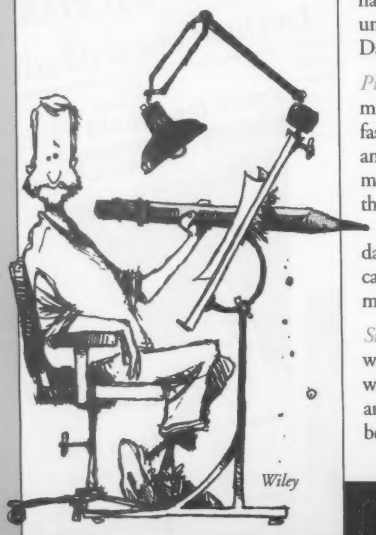
"Pickles" by Brian Crane

The Nation's Housing by Kenneth R. Harney Consumer reporting for homeowners, who make up two-thirds of newspaper readership. With the real estate business undergoing vast changes, this consumer advocate is a valuable resource for homeowners everywhere. Once a week.

Jane Bryant Quinn

Jane Bryant Quinn The nation's No. 1 personal finance columnist, hands down. With common sense and skepticism, Quinn tackles the tough topics, from life insurance to retirement planning to student loans. Loeb Award winner for business journalism, 1995. Twice weekly.

Non Sequitur by Wiley Biting, intelligent and innovative, Non Sequitur pokes fun at those who take themselves too seriously. No one is off-limits. Non Sequitur daily is now available in both strip and panel formats. Wiley's Sunday strips have a painterly texture, unique in the color pages. Daily and Sunday.



Wiley

Pickles by Brian Crane A modern comic strip with old-fashioned gentle humor. Earl and Opal Pickles, retired and married nearly 50 years, use their sense of humor to keep going strong. Their divorced daughter Sylvia, her son Nelson, a cynical cat and dense dog make the Pickles a truly modern family. Daily and Sunday.

Smart Alex by Charlie Podrebarac Alex just wants to do her work, but her bosses and co-workers give her tons of grief. It rings true for anyone who has had to put up with boorish behavior at the office. Daily and Sunday.

WEEKLY COLUMNS

THE AUTOMOTIVE REPORT: A package of at least 12 stories plus DriveTime shorts direct from the industry leaders: Automotive News and AutoWeek. Rebate charts also available. Ideal for your automotive, classified and display sections.

WHEELS 101: A weekly column teaching the basics of buying, owning and driving a car by automotive expert Jayne O'Donnell.

DR. JOB: Q and A column for people hoping to seek and keep jobs or find a new career. Written by business journalist Sandra Pesmen.

THE HOME FRONT: Liven your real estate sections with this residential real estate column by columnist and author Don DeBat.

THE FRANCHISE ADVISER: This advice column written by Ellen Shubart, editor of Franchise Buyer magazine, helps readers learn how to buy—and then run—a franchise successfully.

HEALTHCARE AND YOU: This by healthcare journalist and consumer advocate Duncan Moore, Jr. helps your readers work through the growing maze in the healthcare field.

JAMES BRADY'S WORLD: Wry humor and straight talk from this noted author, national columnist and broadcast personality.

BOB GARFIELD'S AD REVIEW: Biting critiques of television advertising by this perceptive essayist can be used as an alternative to TV columns.

INTERACTIVE MARKETING: Traffic reports from the Internet. An editorial package that teaches business readers how to drive on the information superhighway—and to improve business through interactive marketing from Advertising Age.

SPECIAL PACKAGES

1996 NEW CAR AND TRUCKS: A look at the year's new automotive offerings that includes major makes and models with enough photos and materials to fill an annual New Models special section. Available in early October.

100 YEAR AUTO ALMANAC: Facts and figures about the auto industry and brief histories of automotive companies. Available in late April.

100 EVENTS THAT MADE THE U.S. AUTO INDUSTRY: A chronicle of the most exciting highlights in the auto industry. Available in late June.

CAREERS/EDUCATION: This special package of career and education features with Q and A columns fills jobs, education, graduation, recruitment and classified special sections. Available four times a year.

Yes! I want to build my circulation and advertising base with the editorial resources of Crain News Service. Send me more information and samples of the above products.

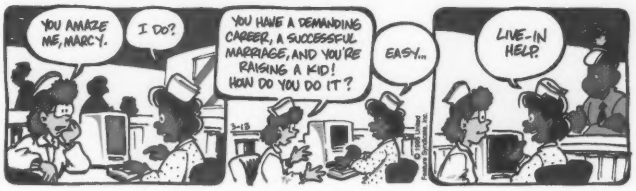
PEANUTS

CHARLES M. SCHULZ

Charlie Brown, Snoopy and the gang charm readers of all ages like no other strip in history. The comics wouldn't be the comics without Peanuts!



JUMP START

ROBB ARMSTRONG

A reflection of today's middle-class America, Jump Start follows a young, African-American family as they chase their dreams and care for each other.

ROSE IS ROSE

PAT BRADY

Brady's mastery of perspective and style, gentle humor and family feeling make Rose is Rose one of the warmest and most beautifully drawn strips in the comics.

OVER THE HEDGE

MICHAEL FRY AND T. LEWIS

NEW

The battle for the burbs hits the comics! A delightfully skewed look at suburban living from the perspective of the animals who lived there first.

9 CHICKWEED LANE

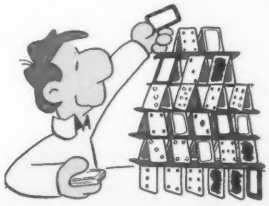
BROOKE MCELDOWNEY

A divorced mom shares her life and her home with her blossoming daughter — and her prickly mother. They rarely agree, but that's half the fun!

DRABBLE

KEVIN FAGAN

Norman Drabble, perpetual college student, never seems to catch on. But this endearingly silly guy and his family certainly have caught on with readers!



COMMITTED ▲

MICHAEL FRY

A comic dose of family reality for anyone who thinks the adventure stops after you say "I do."

MARMADUKE

BRAD ANDERSON

Big laughs from the Great Dane who's always in the doghouse! ▶

NANCY

GUY & BRAD GILCHRIST

This comic strip classic starring Nancy, Sluggo and Aunt Fritzi is back – in all its old glory – by popular demand, sporting the style you loved as a kid, and an attitude that's fun and fresh. ▼

NEW

REALITY CHECK

DAVE WHAMOND

A spirited new panel with a twisted view of the world. ▶

RABBIT EARS PRODUCTIONS

The beautifully illustrated activity page featuring timeless storybook characters and fun activities for kids, plus a weekly public radio series featuring celebrity storytellers that coincides with each featured story.

DILBERT ▲

SCOTT ADAMS

The most photocopied, pinned-up, downloaded, faxed, e-mailed and snail-mailed comic strip in the world, Dilbert exposes life's underlying absurdities with hilarious sarcasm.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

JACK ANDERSON AND MICHAEL BINSTEIN

Nobody gets behind the scenes like this investigative team.

RHETA GRIMSLEY JOHNSON

Reporter and columnist for The Atlanta Journal & Constitution, Grimsley Johnson writes a witty and poignant column, often about her native South.

MISS MANNERS®

JUDITH MARTIN

The excruciatingly correct authority on all things big and small, Miss Manners single-handedly battles rudeness wherever it appears.

ALAN DERSHOWITZ

An acclaimed civil libertarian and extraordinary legal mind, Dershowitz writes a compelling weekly column on topics including capital punishment, freedom of expression and the judicial system.

HARVEY MACKAY

Best-selling author of Swim With the Sharks Without Being Eaten Alive, Mackay offers inspirational career advice plus tips on how to manage and motivate.

COKIE ROBERTS AND STEVEN V. ROBERTS

This husband-and-wife team of celebrated journalists analyzes the news from Washington and comments on issues that affect every home and family.

NEA
THE DAILY SERVICE
NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSOCIATION

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSOCIATION OFFERS HIGHLY ACCLAIMED POLITICAL COMMENTARY, EDITORIAL CARTOONS, COMICS, GRAPHICS AND ILLUSTRATIONS IN A COMPREHENSIVE PACKAGE OF FEATURES FOR ALL SECTIONS OF THE NEWSPAPER.

NAT HENTOFF
This First Amendment authority comments on the state of Americans' rights to think, write and speak freely.

MORTON KONDRACKE
Analyses of politics, foreign policy and the economy from this regular panelist on "The McLaughlin Group."

SARA ECKEL
FOCUS ON WOMEN
Well-research discussion of the issues that concern American women.

NEW

JOSEPH PERKINS

ROBOTMAN
JIM MEDDICK

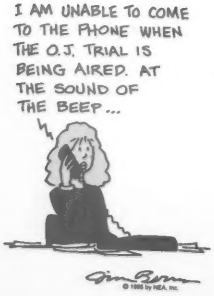
ARLO AND JANIS
JIMMY JOHNSON
A warm and offbeat family comedy that has quietly earned a dedicated following of married, working parents and people with an ear for dry, incisive wit.

BEN WATTENBERG
A sharp-eyed observer of global demographic trends, their political impact and America's strengths.

MARIALISA CALTA
This award-winning food journalist offers recipes for good home-made meals that don't take all day to make. Plus black-and-white photographs from the New England Culinary Institute.

IAN SHOALES
NEA's humor columnist, Ian Shoales strikes the intellect and the funny bone with uncanny accuracy.



BERRY'S WORLD
JIM BERRY
A daily NEA favorite that captures the essence of life as it is shaped by technology, politics, the economy and social changes.

THE BORN LOSER
ART AND CHIP SANSOM
Reader surveys prove it: Brutus Thornapple is the winningest loser in the comics.

On Nutrition
Ed Blonz, PhD.
Clear, concise answers to readers' questions about health and nutrition, from a trained scientist.

NEW

Mutual Funds
Dian Vujovich
Straight talk from The Miami Herald's mutual fund columnist.

NEW

Dr. Peter Gott
Medical answers from this trusted practicing physician.

Guide to Children's TV & Video
Evan Levine
Reviews of the latest TV, videos and films for children, including commentary from panels of kids.

Ask Anne & Nan
These two witty problem-solvers share their secrets for fixing, finding and finishing everything in and around the house.

From Consumer Reports
Thorough product tests and objective ratings for the wary consumer.

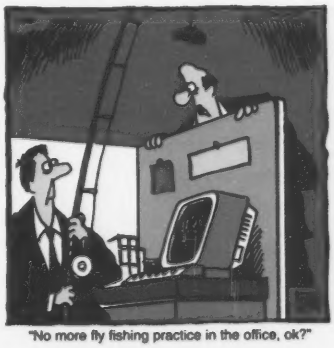
Frank & Ernest
Bob Thaves
Masters of the twisted phrase, this comic duo defies time and space with tongue in cheek.

Win, Lose & Drew
Drew Litton
The editorial sports cartoon that slam-dunks America's favorite past-times.

Kit 'n' Carlyle
Larry Wright
A must-read for fans of felines, Carlyle is this Kit's meow.

Alley Oop
Dave Graue and Jack Bender
The intergalactic adventures of the comics' coolest Neanderthal.

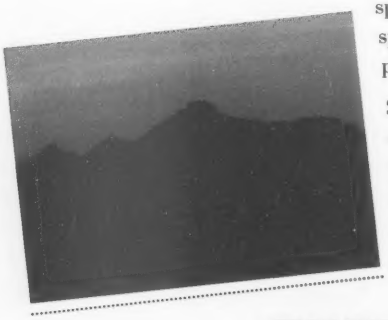
Beattie Blvd
Bruce Beattie
A clever panel that turns perceptions inside out.



"No more fly fishing practice in the office, ok?"

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE offers 100 stories each day: news, sports, features, commentary, opinion, editorials, business, food, entertainment for all ages, politics, health, travel, religion — everything from finance to fishing.

Photos and graphics are available to all clients through our online service. Scripps Howard News Service offers 11 bonus packages each year — stories and art designed to fill special sections on national topics including fitness, spring gardening, summer vacations, back-to-school planning, holiday gifts and major sports seasons.



Scripps Howard News Service is a combination of exceptional talents — the 45-person Washington bureau, Scripps Howard newspapers and contributing partners from across the country and around the world– offering a concisely-edited package of award-winning journalists.

FROM THE WEST: Correspondent Tom Elias, The San Francisco Examiner, The Herald in Monterey, Calif., the Ventura County Star, The Press-Enterprise of Riverside, Calif., The Record-Searchlight in Redding, Calif., The Sun in Bremerton, Wash., The Honolulu Star-Bulletin, The Rocky Mountain News in Denver, The Tribune in Albuquerque, N.M., and the El Paso Herald-Post in Texas.

FROM THE MIDWEST: The Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune, Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Toledo Blade, Evansville Courier, Cincinnati Post and Kentucky Post.

INTERNATIONAL: The Observer of London, Deutsche Presse Agentur and Canada's The Globe and Mail foreign bureaus.

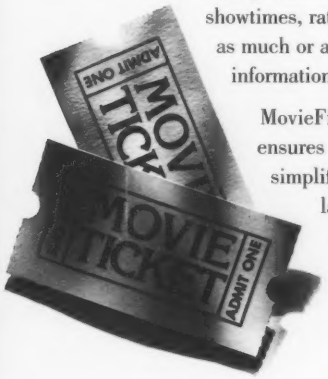
THE MOST INFORMATIVE AND BEST-EDITED OF ALL SUPPLEMENTAL NEWS SERVICES.

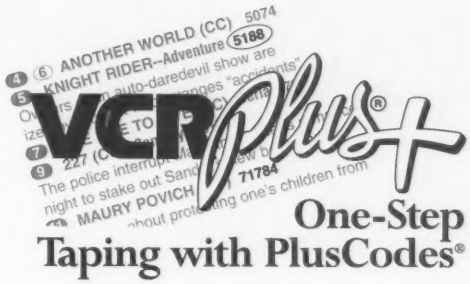
UNITED MEDIA CONTINUES TO EXPLORE NEW TECHNOLOGIES TO INSURE THAT WE DELIVER QUALITY ENTERTAINMENT AND INFORMATION AND BETTER SERVE OUR NEWSPAPER CLIENTS.

MOVIEFINDER

MovieFinder offers the most accurate up-to-the-minute movie listings available anywhere. MovieFinder works just like TV listings and stock quotes: you can customize the movie listings for every theater in your market, offering readers theater locations, showtimes, rating information — as much or as little information as you want.



MovieFinder saves money, ensures accuracy and simplifies a labor-intensive newspaper chore.



VCR PLUS+®

The VCR Plus+ one-step programming system is the world's easiest way to tape your favorite TV shows. The VCR Plus+ technology is built into most new VCRs, PlusCode® numbers are a popular feature of publications worldwide and this hugely successful reader service is a part of more than 1,200 newspapers' TV listings. We offer comprehensive support including exciting contests and reader promotions.

UNITED MEDIA ON THE WEB

United Media's site on the World Wide Web, the multimedia-based portion of the Internet, is the largest collection of nationally syndicated comic strips and the only major collection of editorial cartoons in cyberspace. The collection is grouped into two areas: The Comic Strip™, which features an enhanced area called The Dilbert Zone™, and The Inkwell™, a collection of political cartoons. All comics appear online one week after they have appeared in newspapers, allowing readers to catch up on any favorites they may have missed.
Access it at http://www.unitedmedia.com.

FEATURE DELIVERY OPTIONS

All of our daily comics, columns and graphics are available through the United Media Bulletin Board Service (BBS), which enables newspapers to dial in and download the features they need via modem. Comics and graphics will also be available digitally through ISDN lines. United Media is constantly moving forward in the area of information technology. If your paper has specific delivery needs, please let us know.

Call Lisa Klem Wilson at 800-221-4816.

Jane Horwitz

Cheap Thrills Cuisine by Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui Tasty recipes in a comic strip, served up by lovable Chef Peppi. Easy, fun-to-make dishes popular with everyone from teen-agers to senior citizens. A unique feature for food and feature sections. Color and black-and-white. Once a week.

The Family Filmgoer by Jane Horwitz With The Family Filmgoer as their guide, families can enjoy movies together. Horwitz warns about violence, sex, foul language and stereotyping in movies, but doesn't preach. Reviews of three to four new films a week plus a timely sidebar, "Beyond the Ratings Game." Once a week.

Joel Achenbach

Tom Shales The critic millions of readers turn to for crisp, witty TV reviews and solid reporting of entertainment trends. He measures television programming against basic American values and, not surprisingly, often finds it lacking. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly, plus frequent timely specials.

Washington Post Book World The complete text of Book World enables any newspaper to publish a first-class book section. Book World regularly offers articles on children's books, sci-fi, and book industry news. Frequent reviews and essays by renowned authors. Pulitzer winners Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dirda are featured. Two electronic transmissions a week of Sunday tab and weekday reviews.

Washington Post Magazine Sunday Crossword Puzzle One of the most challenging weekly puzzles available. Each puzzle has a theme suggested by its title. One puzzle a week.

Why Things Are by Joel Achenbach Why questions range from the profound, such as exploring the Big Bang theory, to the mundane, such as why hospital gowns don't close in the back (Answer: To save material). This is a feature for anyone with a curious nature and zany sense of humor. Particularly appealing to young adults. Once a week, with illustrations by Richard Thompson.

A tradition of creativity continues

We're celebrating the 100th anniversary of the comic strip in style! Earlier this year, we made news with the re-introduction of TERRY AND THE PIRATES—a great classic in an all-new '90s format. Our line-up of panels got even better when TRUE! by Darryl Cagle made its debut and the ever-fresh DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE joined TMS. Coming soon is the GHOST STORY CLUB, an innovative feature especially designed to build interactivity with children—and the ADVENTURES OF AARON, a weekly feature that's already a hit with teens and young adults. We'll cap off the year with the national debut of ICK, a great new strip you'll be hearing a lot more about. Together with TMS favorites SHOE, MOTHER GOOSE AND GRIMM, THE BUCKETS, DAVE, BOUND & GAGGED and MIXED MEDIA, and you see why we have reason to celebrate!

TV WEEK Interactive

Delivering quality in new formats

We're the leaders in developing new ways to connect with your readers, in print as well as new media. TMS STOCKS and TMS WEATHER deliver comprehensive, customized packages tailored to your specifications. Our television listings service can even paginate your Sunday book, making zoned listings easy and affordable. US/EXPRESS and the new Spanish language ¡EXTO! EXPRESS offer fully paginated TMCs and special sections. KNIGHT-RIDDER/TRIBUNE now has illustrations in addition to text, photos, graphics and caricatures. VOICE NEWS NETWORK raises audiotex to a new level of quality and newsroom usefulness. Our print feature called WHAT'S ONLINE provides your readers with listings of major interactive events. And our new TMS WEBPOINT and TV WEEK INTERACTIVE products can give a real boost to your own Internet, online and BBS efforts.

Dear Editor:

We were very excited when Investor's Business Daily reported recently, "Creators Syndicate has done the impossible. It has become the first successful independent syndicate in two decades and only the second major independent syndicate founded since the 1930s." It is entirely fitting that as we celebrate the 100th anniversary of the comic strip this year, we remember the traditions of the past while exploring the compelling challenges of the information age. The future opportunities for all of us are unlimited.

Sincerely,

Richard S. Newcombe

"QUICK KIDS! YOUR MOTHER'S FLAMING SOMEONE ON THE INTERNET!"

©The 5th Wave By Rich Tennant

The sharpest pen in the computer industry, Rich Tennant brings humor to hi-tech with his weekly panel, The 5th Wave. In this series, Rich looks at the human side of technology and wires us into a world of vibrating pagers with chattering teeth, Chia-Pet PCs, and The Swiss Army Mouse.

"By providing a link between the local newspaper and Capitol Hill, we hope Congressional Quarterly can make public opinion the only effective pressure group in the country."

Nelson Poynter, Founder
Congressional Quarterly Inc.

A half century ago, Nelson Poynter, owner of the St. Petersburg Times, believed that the American public deserved to know the facts about its government. He believed that democracy could only flourish if the media had these facts and would in turn broadcast them.

Fifty years later, Poynter's words — accuracy, objectivity and timeliness have become our hallmark. And our clientele now includes newspapers, TV networks, virtually every member of Congress, and a host of Congress-watchers in education and the private and public sectors.

Today, CQ publishes daily and weekly publications, fax and electronic online services, reference and college texts, and a first rate professional education service.

But as different as they are, all CQ publications share one thing: They are all a testament to Poynter's vision. And for as long as the public needs accurate, timely and nonpartisan information on Congress, CQ will be there to provide it.

How to solve a tidbits puzzle

A tidbit is a part of a word. The tidbit in the first section of the puzzle is "ti," so the first answer is a word containing "ti" that is "a baseball league"; the answer is "National." The next two answers also are words with "ti" somewhere in them. Find the words that both fit the clues and contain the tidbit. The first letters of the correct answers will spell out a "Waiter's Line."

Answers: National, ovation, Tipper, march, yards, bars, argument, blender, lens, excellent

The Battle for the Burbs Hits the Comics!

Readers nationwide love Over the Hedge, the new surburban farce from United Feature Syndicate by Michael Fry and T. Lewis.

No soft suburbanite is safe from the rollicking adventures of these boisterous "Boys in the Wood."

Don't miss this freshly skewed look at suburban living—from the perspective of the animals who lived there first. For rates and availability for Over the Hedge, please call Lisa Klem Wilson at (800) 221-4816.

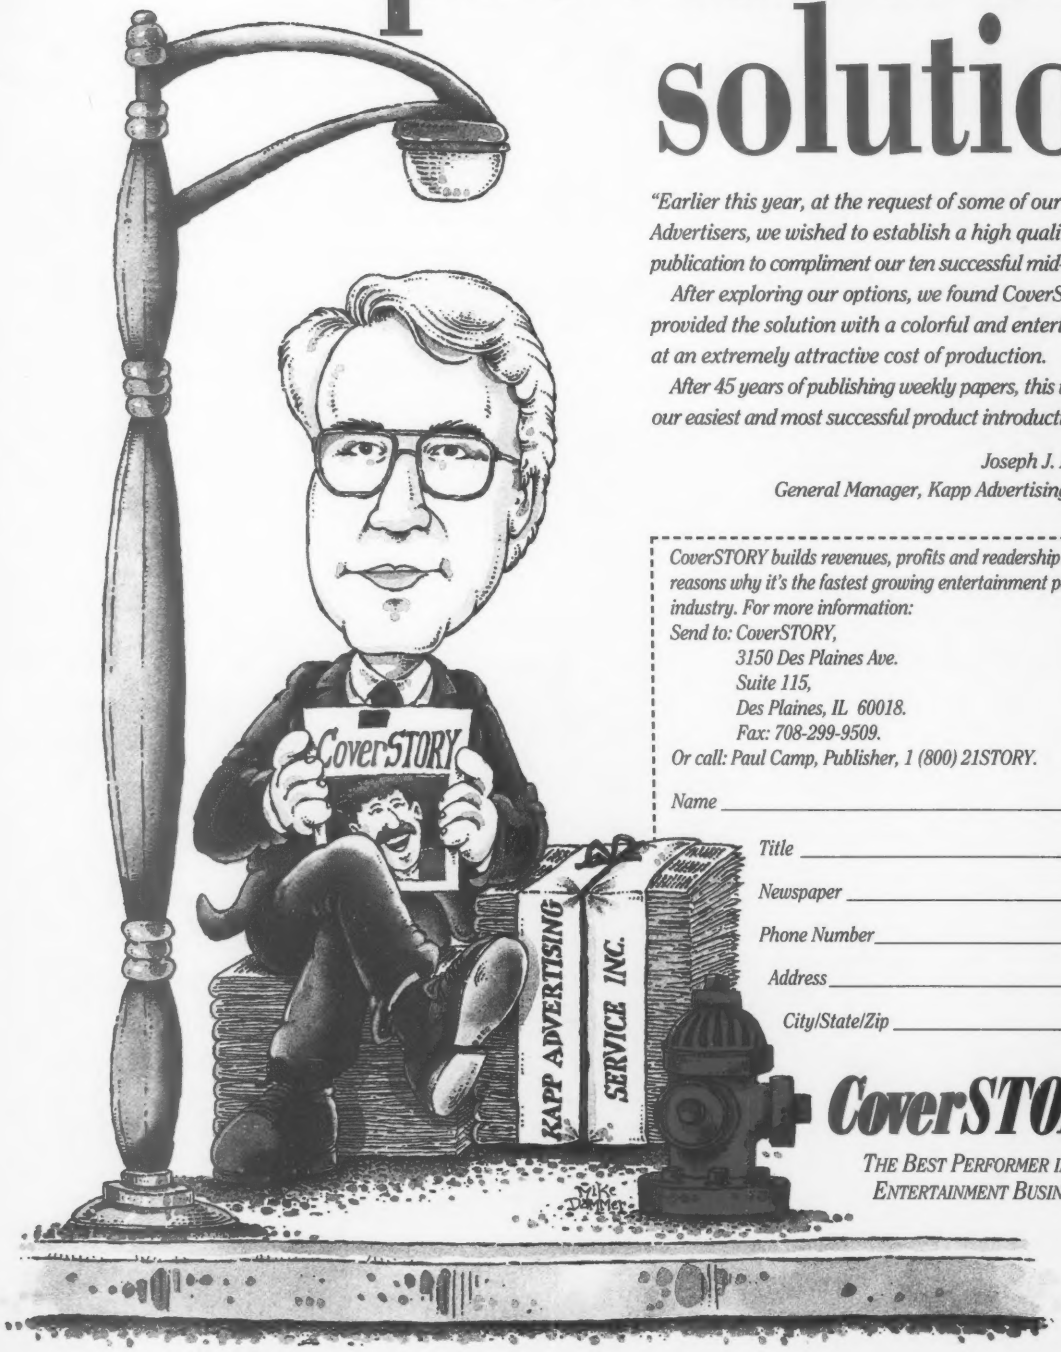
"CoverSTORY provided the solution."



"Earlier this year, at the request of some of our National Advertisers, we wished to establish a high quality weekend publication to compliment our ten successful mid-week editions.

After exploring our options, we found CoverSTORY provided the solution with a colorful and entertaining piece at an extremely attractive cost of production.

After 45 years of publishing weekly papers, this was one of our easiest and most successful product introductions to date."

Joseph J. McDonald, Jr.
General Manager, Kapp Advertising Service, Inc.
